Blue Thrash
Ocean Racing Brings Thrills, Chills

BAHAMAS DEVELOPMENT BOARD

Four hours from the finish line, the magnificent "Mogu," Fred Guggenheim's 67-foot cutter, reaches towards Nassau under main and staysail in a 35-mile easterly breeze. Mogu finished second in the fleet in the 1956 Miami-Nassau race and fifth on corrected time.

By Frank Rohr

THE 1956 MIAMI-NASSAU RACE aboard the 67-foot cutter, "Mogu," was a boisterous blue thrash of 31 hours. But "Mogu," owned by F. S. Guggenheim of Lowell, Mass., a local favorite in this 18th annual classic of the Southern Ocean Racing Conference, liked the first day's hard head winds as she began her exacting 184-mile beat to Nassau.

Jockeying for position under main and staysail before the noon start, her 14-man crew put the slim cutter through an easy series of racing paces as she split tacks with the 24-boat fleet on a brilliant Gulf Stream chop off the white towers of Miami Beach.

As a corinthian crew member, I took my orders with the others while owner-master Guggenheim and his amateur racing skipper, Ken Albury of Nassau, cried "ready about," and "coming about," and "trim that main."

"There goes the signal," shouted Mogu's professional captain, Musty Somers, at noon. Bearing up just behind the leaders, close to the starting line marked by the Coast Guard Cutter "Aurora," we broke out our masthead genoa jib which had been hoisted in stops on the headstay like a silken sausage roll in anticipation of the close-reaching start. Among the spectators aboard "Aurora," our owner's wife, "Mrs. Mogu," as beautiful as her namesake, waved us good luck.

FRANK ROHR JR.

"Sheet her home," cried helmsman Albury, and the big nevins winches spun chattering as our racing teams whipped the genoa sheets around their drums and pulled the 1640 square-foot sail against "Mogu's" port shrouds. Within moments, we came about again and took up position on the fleet's right flank, close-hauled on the fresh easterly breeze, heading ESE across the Gulf Stream.

To allow for the Stream's 2.8 average northerly drift, we planned our strategy to fetch up at Bimini, 50 miles due east of Miami. With a norther in the vicinity, we gambled that the breeze would haul to the west as predicted, and permit us presently to cover the fleet by reaching 30 miles north to Great Isaac light, the first marker and our turning point down Northwest Providence Channel for Great Stirrup light and Nassau.

"Everyone up on the weather side," ordered the helmsman, and we sat braced against the steep heel of the boat as she gathered way like a greyhound and began cutting eastwards across the smart little Gulf Stream seas.

Rail down, scuppers drowned in a running fleece of salt water, "Mogu" began to outpoint and overtake the big boats up to windward. The sun shone warmly on her wetted teak decks, but we pulled our rubberized foul weather gear about us to keep the flying salt spray out and the heat in as the afternoon wore on and we dropped Miami's skyline far astern.

Still close-hauled on the port tack, "Mogu" overtook the 67-foot yawl, "Gulfstream," up to windward, and gradually passed the only boat to leeward, the 63-foot sloop, "Good Hope." The 67-foot Cuban yawl, "Criollo," who had seized the lead at noon, was still ahead, seconded by the 80-foot Texas entry, "Valiant."

In the fresh easterly wind, "Mogu" swept over the rising seas at 8 and 9 knots, canting her dark hull at the sky as she heeled way over in the puffs. The breeze had backed to the east rather than hauling, and was blowing a steady 16 knots. We knew we'd have to tack smartly now to work our way through the fleet. Except for trimming the mainsail and genoa thus far, however, our race had been as swift as undemanding. The great cutter herself was doing all the work.

At six that evening, as the wind freshened with the failing light and "Mogu" flung occasional wave tops aft with a vengeance at the watch on deck, we sighted Bimini. After carrying on close enough to insure a good initial slant northwards for Great Isaac, we prepared to tack ship.

"Ready about," cried the helmsman, and he put her wheel over. Beside him, the racing teams set up "Mogu's" leeward backstay, cast off her leeward genoa sheet, and winched it home on the opposite tack while the great sail came thundering around and the boat leaped ahead. Sheets and backstay secure, her crew moved to the wet weather side, and the helmsman steadied her on the new course. Our hard windward work had begun.

"Chow down" called "Mogu's" cook-mate, Frank Davidson, and my section, who would take the deck watch for the next three hours, went below to a gimballed main cabin table set with hot roast beef, beans, potatoes, and coffee. Balancing at an angle that would upset a fly, we sat down to a strength-giving meal, ate almost all of it, and went on deck to relieve the others.

In the moonless, windy night, we kept sharp watch for the dimly-lit racing yachts, all heading for the Isaac beacon, and tacked twice before picking up this marker. The Bahama Banks are dangerous here, and no matter how often you've found the sky-searching Isaac beacon on a wild night, you're tense until you've seen its regular flare, and oddly happy afterwards, no matter how bumpy the Stream.

Bill Turtle, a Bahamian himself, and one of "Mogu's" corinthian stalwarts, found the light this time, and we tacked towards it in company with the leaders of the racing fleet and two small steamers, glowing like Christmas trees on a black moor.

The breeze had steadied in the east, and we beat into a half gale that continually drenched "Mogu's" decks as we tacked past Great Isaac light at 9:30 p.m. and down Northwest Providence Channel.

"This is going to be a dead beat right to Nassau," said our starboard watch captain, Jack Dempsey of Miami, as he settled down for his long face-wetting trick at the wheel. And so it was, for the next 70 miles to Great Stirrup light, the eastern turning point of the race, and the following 57 miles from Stirrup to Nassau harbor.

By midnight, well into the channel, "Mogu" was laboring under main and genoa, burying her rail and ploughing a star-filled bow wake with her shrouds and life rails.

"She's overcanvassed," said racing skipper Ken Albury. And after conferring with master Fred Guggenheim and "Mogu's" professional captain, Musty, who had relieved the wheel and was working like ten, he called out all hands for a midnight sail change.

The foredeck of a racing yacht like "Mogu" on a blowy mid-watch is like the birth of the world in canvas and water—or the end. Sixty-seven feet forward of the cockpit is a lunging bucking beast that tries drowning you one instant while you cling desperately to her pulpit, and throwing you over the moon the next as she shouts windy imprecations down from the dark height of her 96-foot mast.

You've set a small staysail that's supposed to blanket the big genoa jib, but the wind howls in its new kite and you're bowling along faster, heeled further than ever. Now, your breathing turned to sobs and your muscles to memories, you're trying to lower and gather a brute of a genoa jib that loves the baby gale filling it and heaving the ship herself half under water.

Somehow, you and the other ants in rubber clothes working alongside you get it down. Heartened by "Mogu's" foredeck bosun, Moe Harrison of Miami, you set the smaller jib topsail, lash the genoa bag on deck and secure all sheets and haliards. You creep aft then, satisfied if soaking, and realize it wasn't so bad just crouching on the weather side hours at a time, taking an occasional drenching wave. But the boat responds gratefully. She seems more alive, and you know she's still racing at the limit of her capacity.

The pre-dawn watch was taken by our shipmates. We went below to a damp and drunkenly slanting main cabin, and distributed ourselves for a few hours' sleep on the available bunks.

One of my watchmates was Morris McLemore, the Miami Daily News sports editor, a big man, adventurous and willing, but a novice at ocean racing.

"Well, Mack, how do you like it?" I asked as we shed our wringing foul weather gear.

"Ah'd say it's better than being poked in the eye with a sharp stick," he answered, and went to sleep under a slow leak in the lee bunk.

By 8 a.m. next day, "Mogu" had rounded Great Stirrup light and cleared the Berry Islands. Heading SE into a 30-mile easterly breeze, we could lay the harbor of Nassau on one tack. But out in the Tongue of the Ocean now, the ESE wind that had been making up all night sent its bright blue squadrons of heavy seas against us, and "Mogu" plunged wildly as she made good 8.5 knots on course for Nassau. The only boat ahead of us, "Criollo," had vanished shortly before dawn. There was none visible astern.

Although the wind permitted us to ease sheets slightly, it freshened, gusting up to 40 mph towards mid-day, and "Mogu" began shipping green water and losing knots as she labored in the troughs. Another watch captain's conference decided to shorten sail. Fighting the ship's motion, we fisted down the jib topsail and carried on more efficiently under main and staysail.

Then, at 5 p.m., a shout of "Nassau, mon, Nassau," came from the lookout, and the whole crew stood on the weather side to pick out Nassau's white water tower, beautifully quiet and far over a turbulent wave-rimmed horizon. Two hours later in the gusty darkness, we had raised the whole twinkling island. With Ken Albury at the helm, and everyone on deck, we made for the flashing harbor entrance.

Moments before finishing the race, the clew of our overworked staysail blew out. We hauled down the sail, machine-gunning itself above the foredeck, and crossed the line between Nassau's lighthouse and the waiting committee boat at 7:38 p.m. — 30 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds after the start. We were second in the fleet after the grand slam winner, "Criollo," and fifth boat on corrected time.

"'Mogu's' a sweet swift boat," said Fred Guggenheim after we moored inside at the crowded clanking docks of Yachthaven and toasted a race well-run, a worthy ship, and a crew as exhilarated as exhausted.

"I think she performed excellently this time, and some day, perhaps with the same gang aboard, I hope we'll sweep the fleet in this race."

If any boat can do it, "Mogu" can. Designed by George Owen and built 27 years ago in East Boothbay, Maine, by Hodgdon Brothers, she's been everything in her sailing life from a schooner to her present cutter rig. Fred Guggenheim bought her two years ago and has her registered in the St. Petersburg Yacht Club.

Though she's well-fitted for living aboard with a double owner's cabin and bath aft, and large main salon with bunks and settees for four amidships, "Mogu" is primarily a racing machine. Just last March, in his first year with "Mogu," her owner took first place, boat for boat, in the St. Pete-Havana race. With his friends and competitors in the Southern Ocean Racing Conference, he's preparing once more for this mid-March contest.

With the entire fleet, "Mogu" entered the Governor's Cup day race off Nassau. It was a bright brisk 30-mile sail, with "Criollo" and "Mogu" sweeping over the line in a stately spinnaker run, first and second in elapsed time.

That evening, the week's lavish welcoming parties for visiting yachtsmen, given by the Governor and Countess of Ranfurly at Government House and R. T. Symonette at "Red Roofs," were climaxed by the Yacht Club banquet where race trophies were awarded.

Ocean racing is a peculiar sport. Its adherents range from the mystically dedicated to the cynically disenchanted. Almost all of them have been smitten hard with the romance and beauty of sailing the sea. And all of them, if they've seriously pursued their sport, have at times been frightened by the sea's revealed unhuman strength, depressed with the hardships of life afloat, and occasionally ashamed of the poseurs who also practice ocean racing.

Yet the lure persists, like an aura, beyond the present discomfort. And there are satisfying moments of speed and power in the fine performance of a good boat in tough competition. And the ocean racing crowd, with a surprisingly large number of familiar faces, reappears each season. Yachts like "Mogu" assure their presence and the persistence of their sport.

Royal Palms Inn

PHOENIX, ARIZONA

By Fontayne Semaine

IN ANCIENT DAYS all roads led to Rome, but in these modern times people from all over the world in increasing numbers are flocking to Arizona. Where else in this country of ours can one in a single day's drive go from the sun drenched desert which surrounds Phoenix to the awe inspiring Grand Canyon which is the home of molten color by day and a blue mystery by moonlight; or to the border town of Nogales, Arizona's gateway to old Mexico. Flagstaff is the heart of the northern Arizona wonderland, and the State's ski center, and further to the west is Lake Mead, the largest Man-made Lake in the World, which is rapidly becoming a fisherman's paradise. We must not forget Lakeside which is in the Show Low area. Here truly is the ideal place for an Arizona Summer vacation. Many Arizonians are learning of the cool pine-scented breezes that bathe Lakeside. They talk in glowing terms of the friendly local folk, forest bridle paths, and marvelous fishing.

Here at the Royal Palms Inn we're terribly conscious of the phenomenal growth which is going on all around us. We want our guests to know Arizona, to really get the feel of living here. Each week a group departs on some unknown jaunt — The Apache Trail, Oak Creek Canyon, or to Jerome which is the nation's latest and largest ghost town — to explore and learn more about the heartbeat of this state.

Among our guests making their first visit are Messrs. and Mmes. Francis Duffy of Englewood, N.J.; Gordon H. Ball and Hugh Miller of Danville, Calif.; W. T. Egolf of Oklahoma City; and Edward H. Hills of Westfield, N. J.

Our city of Phoenix is the geographical, political, cultural, and economic center of Arizona. Natural resources are behind the success of many of Arizona's cities and so they are in the case of Phoenix. A superb climate and amazingly fertile soil form the foundation on which Phoenix has built its attraction and economy. The bright sunshine and dry clear air which have popularized the Phoenix area for vacationists have done the same thing for industry. In the last few years more than one hundred fifty manufacturers, employing five or more employees each have moved into Phoenix. Of great importance to the growth of this city is the agricultural production — over 530,000 acres are under cultivation in this area with all watering done by irrigation. Water is stored in huge dams more than eighty miles away from here and brought into the valley through an elabor-

Just twelve miles from downtown Phoenix, and only two miles from Royal Palms Inn is "The West's Most Western Town," Scottsdale. Boasting an informality and quaintness rarely found in areas of tremendous growth, Scottsdale offers a contrast of mountains and desert and vigorous Western activity. Here you will find an abundance of exclusive shops where artists and craftsmen present their original creations — hand made silver jewelry, hand screened textiles, sculpture, ceramics, and leatherwork. We believe that Scottsdale in the years to come will be a strong competitor for number three place as the world's fashion center only falling behind Paris and New York.

So it is understandable to us that some of our guests who return to vacation with us year after year stand in amazement each year at the changes and new wonders with which they are confronted. Friends of long standing who have returned to vacation with us this Winter include State Senator and Mrs. Luther Gibson of Vallejo, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. George McGrew and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Price, all of Kansas City, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. John McKnab of Wichita, Kans.; Mr. and Mrs. Armin McGregor and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stratton all of Milwaukee, Wisc.; Mr. and Mrs. William Pratt Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wolf all of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Speltz of Memphis, Tenn.; and the Henry Vance family of Manchester, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Simpson, prominent Chicagoans spending the season at Camelback Inn, where they have spent their Winters since 1946, were joined by their son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Beckwith of San Antonio.

Ready to attend the annual Phoenix Rodeo in mid-March in Phoenix is Baron Aleco Noghes de Massy, former brother-in-law of Prince Rainier III of Monaco, who is spending his second season at Camelback Inn.

MID-MARCH is a time for gaiety at Camelback Inn where the sun is shining its brightest and warmest for vacationers and their outdoor activities and as dark falls, some of the seasons most elaborate parties are taking place, including the fabulous Golddiggers Ball on Friday evening, which was long anticipated by vacationers and Valley of the Sun socialites.

And the following day, sun holidaymakers turned their eyes from the fairways to the new Baltimore Orioles' Winter nest as the team played the Chicago Cubs in its opening game at the Spring training headquarters in nearby Scottsdale, another major recreation to add to the pleasures of desert vacationing.

Friday evening, the long-awaited Golddiggers Ball took guests down through the years of history of the West to the days of '49. In those days, the only law was the fastest draw, and to authenticate atmosphere, the spacious dining rooms and lounge were transformed into a setting of the rip-roaring days with a Slippery Gulch saloon, livery stables, and an entrance to the gold mine.

Respective professions of the guests were boldly and amusingly advertised on placards about the rooms. Much secrecy had shrouded preparations for the soiree, for vacationers were transformed for the night into blacksmiths, capricious can-can girls, gay caballeros, and threatening bandits.

The annual fete is so important to many guests that they arrange their sojourns a season ahead in order to be present for the party. Valley of the Sun socialites in select numbers annually attend from nearby Scottsdale and Phoenix, and forego twentieth century comforts as they perch on bales of hay to watch the Victorian floor show and enjoy a midnight Miners' Free Lunch. Such delicacies as were served will never find their way to a mining camp!

Wranglers from Inn stables added a note of color and authenticity to the ball as they called gay squares for dancing.

Among the revelers were early March arrivals, the W. Custer Hammonds of Kalamazoo, Mich., and the Lake Placid Club, N. Y., here until April 18. He is chairman of the board of Hammond Machinery Builders. Other Lake Placid Club members on hand for festivities were Mr. and Mrs. Nellis M. Crouse and their daughter of Ithaca, N. Y.

A gay group included the Conger Goodyears, 654 Madison Avenue, goldiggers for the evening and here to spend March with

The Whitneys recently traveled to the West Coast to see their first movie production, "The Searchers," previewed at a party given in their honor by Jack Warner. They also attended a party given by Mike Romanoff in honor of their long time friends, Grace Kelly and Prince Rainier.

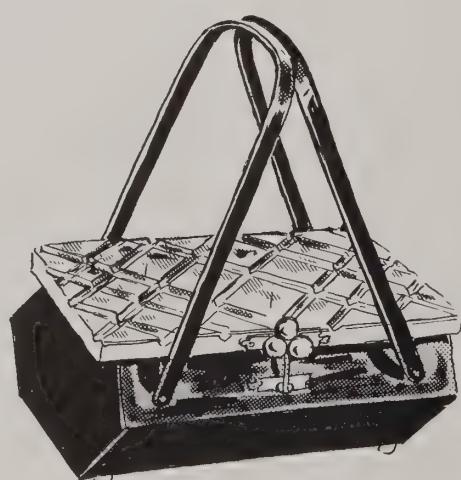

At another corner were Eastern Seaboard arrivals Mr. and Mrs. George Firkser of Manhasset, president of Andrews Paper Co.; the Harold F. Nortons of Norton Lilly & Co., steamship lines; and the Andrew Haires, publishing board chairman back for a second visit this season.

After wintering in Jamaica, B.W.I., for five years, the Cutter Davises of Springville, Erie County, N. Y., have chosen the desert and were on hand for the ball, as were the Lyman Popes of East Kingston, N. H., who are out on the bridle paths early each day.

Among the costumed guests were Van B. Sims, vice-president of Lord & Taylor, who with Mrs. Sims arrived in time to masquerade and will remain until April 3.

Manhattan March arrivals watching the colorful floor show included the Edward Churchills, here for a month with Mike, Tom and Mary Jane; the Walter Haskins, steel executive from Huntington Bay; the Edward Hamiltons with Teddy Jr.; and the W. Reluctantly ending their desert holidays recently were the J. S. Ellithorpes Jr. of Canajoharie, N. Y., Beechnut Company president; and the E. B. Osborns, president of Economics Laboratories, New York City.

A farewell and welcome to a neighbor were extended to veterans of 15 seasons at Camelback Inn, the Vernon Stouffers and their daughter, Deanette, who were honored at a testimonial banquet attended by 200 vacationers. They are now occupying their new Mummy Mountain Winter home near the Inn and enjoying its sweeping 80-mile view of the valley from its lofty site.

On hand to pay tribute to their close friends were the Donald McBeths of Cleveland.

The same city was represented, too, by prominent honeymooners, the Herbert Ladds Jr., who will establish a home at Houston, Tex., where he is stationed as a lieutenant in the Air Force. The winds off Lake Michigan blow long and cold in March and a pleasant contrast is the bronzing warmth of our desert sun. On hand for the opening Orioles game with the Chicago Cubs were many prominent from that area, headed by Roy C. The arrival of the Orioles brings four major league teams to this area for spring training, the New York Giants at Phoenix, Cleveland Indians at Tucson, Chicago Cubs at Mesa, all of whom will compete in a series of eight games during March at nearby Scottsdale.

Chicago rooters will include, too, the Norman Dunbecks of Winnetka, president of International Minerals and Chemicals Corp., vacationing with the Marshall H. Jones of Jackson, Ohio, president of Globe Iron Co.

and his attractive wife, who were the incentive for a party in their honor. The Simpsons haven't missed a season since 1946.

The Golddiggers Ball came at a time when the entire Valley of the Sun was making preparations for the annual World's Championship Rodeo in Phoenix, 11 miles away. Guests showed acute interest in the sleekly tailored Western wear presented by Porter's Western Store around the pool. And little wonder, for the hapless vacationer caught on city streets after the Rodeo opens March 16 for three days will be fined or impounded if clad only in conventional attire.

Phoenix business and professional men arrange the Rodeo annually to raise thousands of dollars for Youth Welfare and in the Fall there is a Junior Rodeo in which children compete, to swell funds for Arizona Crippled Children's Home.

Miss Clara Hodges, assistant secretary of the Champaign, Ill., Chamber of Commerce, holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Keck and their daughter, Jacqueline, enjoyed the timely poolside fashion parade, as did the Leo Busheys of Lincolnwood, here until the end of the month, and Mrs. Merle Trees.

Socially prominent St. Louis personalities are among the vacationers enjoying the noon-day sun and Camelback's famous daily buffet under the brilliant blue canopy of sky. Mrs.

Enjoying the Camelback Inn greens in the warm Winter sun are putters Mr. and Mrs. Ogden C. White, Chicago Athletic Club members.

Fred H. Deibel arrived in early February for her annual two-month stay and has been joined for a month by her son Eddie. Current vacationers who gave up their annual Winter stay at the Breakers in Palm Beach for desert sunshine are the Dr. William Beckes, Mrs. Frank J. V. Krebs, her daughter, Mrs. Hiram Norcross Jr., Mrs. Norcross Sr., and all were joined for several weeks by the Sardis.

A vice-president of the Bank of St. Louis, Minard T. MacCarthy, arrives tomorrow to remain through Easter with his wife and children, Ann and Doug. His brother, John MacCarthy, and a former Camelback Inn vacationer, has purchased a Winter home in nearby Arcadia.

The flower gardens are a blaze of color and beauty to behold edging the flagstone walks and paths and cutting the lawns into color-edged patterns. The effect is one of never-ending pleasure to New Englanders wintering on the desert. The John P. Dempseys Jr. of Wellesley have joined her father and mother, the Erastus Badgers of Boston. The H. H. Davises of Edgewater Park, Miss., have joined his sister and brother-in-law, the Robert Wallaces of Brookline, for the desert's beauty and sunshine. From Portland, Maine, are the Miles Bakers, far, far from the snowy coastline they know.

The Breakers

By Amy Lyman Phillips

THE BREAKERS, now enjoying its 60th season, including the several inns which preceded the one which burned in 1925, has the most unique location of any Palm Beach hotel. With its broad ocean terrace where one watches the ships go by, or the fishing boats busy at their day's work; the Casino with its swimming pool of Olympic size, its sun rooms and baths; its Seaside Restaurant where hundreds congregate for luncheon, its seventy-odd Cabanas facing the sea, and its own beach for surf bathing, its fame has spread far.

On the west side, the Bowling Green, where matches are held on Sunday afternoons, and the Putting Green, with its weekly matches on Wednesdays, supplement the Palm Beach Golf Club, adjacent to the hotel, where frequent golf tournaments are held by members, also members of the Old Guard Society of Palm Beach Golfers, of which James Ballentine is president. The last of the important championship golf tournaments is held in March when a large field of men will compete for trophies given by the Club. And there also is the Shuffleboard Court facing the ocean in front of the hotel.

With all this available, coupled with the special entertainment and social life of the Breakers, the clientele may choose from dozens of other entertainments offered in Palm Beach.

Deep-sea fishing is a favorite sport with guests this season, and the Palm Beach Biltmore "pony express" for Hialeah has almost daily visitors from The Breakers to try their luck at this super race

THE STATE ARSENAL at SAINT AUGUSTINE

SAINT AUGUSTINE's time-honored social tradition, like those of Continental cities, is built on generations-old groups; and one of the most durable of these is the military set, which centers on the State Arsenal with its 193 years of martial occupancy and Officers Clubs.

The present garrison, headed by Major General Mark W. Lance, consists largely of officers—the headquarters staff of the Florida Military Department and the State's National Guard. Today, with Florida at peace, the Armory is a big office housing a force of civilian workers; though its old walls have survived a whole series of battles, three devastating fires, and innumerable weddings, funerals and assorted parties under the Spanish, the English, and the U. S. Regular Army. At least one wall is believed to date back to 1577, when the original building was constructed by Franciscan monks.

The heads of the organization and their ladies are quartered in a row of beautiful old houses facing the Matanzas River and backed by a wide-stretching garden plot. At the head of this Officers' Row live General and Mrs. Lance; she was Miss Mae Grass Conner of Nashville. The Lances play an important part in St. Augustine's social and community life; their annual New Year's reception is a high-point of the Winter season.

Viscountess Scarsdale of London, Alfred Barton and Bea Lillie at a dinner party given by the Anthony Fertitas at their Cocoanut Grove Playhouse restaurant. The Viscountess is vacationing in Nassau with the Viscount; Miss Lillie appeared at the Grove Playhouse.

GROWN FOLKS like to play cowboys and Indians as well . . . if not better . . . than small fry! As witness the way they turned out in all sorts of regalia for the Surf Club's first costume ball, "Buffalo Bill," in two years.

Best friends didn't recognize one another behind mutton chop whiskers and snake charmer veils. As far as the can-can girls were concerned, maybe the eyes didn't get as far as the faces!

Sets for the party were gorgeous, judges for the best costumes were "the most," to quote Alfred Barton, executive secretary of the Surf, who dreams up these extravaganzas.

The star studded list of judges was composed of Bea Lillie, famous comedienne, here to open at the Coconut Grove Playhouse; Constance Carpenter, bright star of the stage; Johnny-cry-baby-singer-Ray; Lucius Beebe, bon vivant and co-publisher with Charles Clegg of the Virginia City Territorial Enterprise, amazing newspaper in this ghost town of 600.

Mr. Beebe and Mr. Clegg arrived in Miami aboard their fabulous private car, "Virginia City." When they had it built they declared that they wanted it "opulent and vulgar"! It is . . . with crystal chandeliers, roccoco furnishings, paintings and objects d' art.

First prize went to Celeste and Charlie Moon as Annie Oakley and Buffalo Bill. Celeste's dark hair hung about her shoulders and her plaid dress, strung with medals, antiquated hat and rifle were authentic copies of the real Annie's.

Charlie was Buffalo to the life . . . with wide gray mustache and gray "bobbed" hair under his wide brimmed hat above his buckskin fringed shirt and trousers.

Lanny Ross was honor guest with Mrs. Ross of Ione and Jefferson Wynne. Never saw Ione in a more becoming costume than her can-can girl feathers and frills. She and Jeff, a gay nineties dandy, were prize winners.

Others who went home with the "bacon" were the Ralph Crums; Jim Gerity in a yellow plaid "gambler's" suit; Larry Haugen, a riot in a blonde wig and dress of Annie Oakley; Sadie and Pat Cummings in twin Western outfits; Marcia Pawley (junior) and Dix Mason as the front and back end of "Get Along Little Dogie"; the Fred Blackmons as a river boat gambler and his lady; Annie Loys Smith as a music hall girl in blue satin, her Rouse as an old fashioned bartender; Margaret Choate, smothered in vivid pink ostrich feathers, Judge Emmett Choate just added a string tie to his conventional dinner coat apparel; Elsa and Bill Stubblefield in elaborate gay nineties evening dress (no one recognized Bill behind his black whiskers); Billie and Julio Sanchez in wonderful gay 90's attire . . . to name a few.

Col. William Reinhardt's cowboy outfit, leather chaps and fur vest was "for real." Some friends sent it to him from the West. He was "roasting" but having fun.

Pretty movie star Gloria de Haven is a tiny girl . . . but all in the right places, as was evident in her brief black can-can ruffles.

At the Surf Club Buffalo Bill Ball, from the left: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Law Weed Jr., son of the prominent architect; Constance Carpenter, stage star, and Bea Lillie; Tomajean Akers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Akers of Washington and Miami Beach, as a snake charmer; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moon, first prize winners at the ball, as Annie Oakley and Buffalo Bill.

Her fiance, Dick Fincher, was a puzzle . . . his costume was leopard cloth!

Cap. Ehrhart's Indian chief regalia made the blood run cold. The horned headdress over Cap's long black wig ("It scratches my bald head!" he said) set off his darkened face and body and he carried a gruesome replica of a human shin bone.

Bonnie Wenndorf was behind the green veil of a snake charmer and startled everyone with her long make-believe snake. Her Ebby's curly and luxuriant mustache kept getting in his mouth!

Katie Heslop was a two-gun pistol packin' mama with live caps in her guns. Rex Sanders' red and black plaid suit was a sight; Harriet Young's enormous black plumed hat became her as did Gertrude Laughter's pink plumed merry widow bonnet.

Speaking of balls . . . benefit balls are the order of the day in these peak months. Beautiful dark haired Nancy Greene put on the tenth annual polio benefit (with her Bob's help) at L'Aiglon, and raised $40,000 for the cause.

Emmy Whitehead, Coca-Cola heiress, entertained a large table at this gala party, which was emceed by clever Dean Murphy, and had Vaughan Munroe as a stellar performer.

Indefatigable party giver and goer, Claire Hayden was squired by George Sofield; Jeannie Putnam by Dick Walters. Prince and Princess Jay Rospigliosi and the Carl Twitchells (she's the A & P heiress) were dining and dancing.

Fred Snite's benefit dinner dance for St. Francis Hospital at the Surf Club made the hospital $45,000 richer. Fred footed the bill for $20,000 for this party which more than 700 guests attended.

Mrs. W. Alton Jones and Mrs. Walter Olson, co-chairmen of the ball, hosted large tables with their husbands. Among guests at Mrs. Jones' table were the John Galbreaths (she is the former Mrs. Russell Firestone) and distinguished Senator John Bricker, a former governor of Ohio, and Mrs. Bricker. Others were Niles Trammel, former head of NBC, and Mrs. Trammel, Mrs. Edward S. Moore, owner of Circle M Farm and racing stable, and Joe Timilty, one-time commissioner of police in Boston.

Before this ball, Sally and Tony Fertitta, owners of the Coconut Grove Playhouse restaurant, entertained at cocktails at their Grove home for Viscountess Scarsdale and the incomparable Bea Lillie. Then on to dine at their restaurant.

Viscountess Scarsdale had just arrived from Trinidad, and was en route to Nassau to join the Viscount there. Sally Fertitta visited the Viscount and Viscountess at their historic home, Kedleston Hall in England.

Tom Aubry, center, was host at a cocktail dance at the Surf Club. Shown with him are the ladies who acted as hostesses, from the left, Mrs. F. Rouse Smith, Mrs. Lino Sertel, Mr. Aubry, Mrs. Spratt Mangus and Mrs. Don Allen.

This vast estate, home for eight centuries of the Curzons, is one of the show places in England. It not only has stately marble halls and alabaster columns but also fifteen baths and four and a half miles of plumbing!

Denis Hennessy, British Consul in Miami, and Mrs. Hennessy were among those asked to meet the English visitors.

Next benefit on the crowded calendar was the Jewel Ball at the new Eden Roc Hotel, which brought $25,000 into the coffers of the Heart Association.

Mrs. Alfred Betancourt and Mrs. Edwin Sanders, both long-time residents of Miami, were co-chairmen of this beautiful ball. Jane Fisher and Phoebe (Mrs. Frank) Morse sparked the evening with a lively fashion show skit before the performances of Gloria de Haven and her father, Carter de Haven, and Joe E. Lewis.

Mrs. Maude Daoud of Atlantic City and New York loaned her fabulous collection of jewels for the event, some $6,000,000 worth! Also on display was the unbelievable Crown of the Andes with its glittering emeralds and diamonds.

Jane gave a cocktail party honoring Mrs. Daoud a few days before the ball at her home on Biscayne Island. Here Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former director of the U. S. Mint and a former governor of Wyoming, was greeting her long-time friend, Mary Roebling, often called the "High heeled financier."

Attractive Mary is head of one of this country's largest banks, the Trenton Trust Co., and is on the board of 24 corporations! She was in Miami from Palm Beach as guest of the James Dickeys at their home in Surfside.

Jane's amazing mother, "Miss Ada" (Mrs. George Welsh), 90 year old dynamo, not only helped entertain guests at the party but also took part in the skit at the ball.

Former president of Hialeah, John Clark, and Mrs. Clark were in the party as were the president, Eugene Mori, and son, Gene Jr.

Sir Victor Sassoon, said to be one of the richest men in the world, flew over from Nassau for luncheon and the races. He was in conversation with attractive blonde Mary Fisher of the Fisher Bodies family.

Bill Veeneman and a group of friends have formed a syndicate and bought a vast ranch near Ocala where they plan to breed thoroughbreds. Others in the group include George Obrecht of Baltimore and Tom Wood of Cincinnati, both annual Winter colonists in Miami Beach.

Out on the back terrace were John Barry Ryan and more British turf fans. The visitors were his guests and are stopping at the Golden Strand Hotel. They were the Earl and Countess of Sefton and Lord and Lady Dunraven.

FIFTY YEARS AGO ST. AUGUSTINE'S SEASON more or less closed out in February, the grand finale being the annual Washington's Birthday Ball. But times have changed, and so has the climate; and nowadays February finds local society just getting into its stride.

Winter golf opened with a bang when the Inter-City Women's Golf League held its February tournament over the Ponce de Leon golf course, with entries from all over North Florida. Mrs. R. C. Blackmer, this year's champion of the St. Augustine Women's Golf Association, directed this event.

The ruffled fairways had barely been smoothed when they were taken over by the Annual National Championship of Golf Club Champions for men, with more than 100 club champions contesting.

As before, this week-long event was topped off on Saturday night by the Junior Service League fashion show "Shades of Scheherazade," put on for charity by the younger social set. This year's cast was headed by W. I. Drysdale as the sultan, and members of his harem were Mrs. S. Askew McLucas, Mrs. Robert T. Sircy, Mrs. Chester E. Benet Jr., Mrs. M. M. Foxworth Jr., Mrs. Richard Holman, and Mrs. Bert Meade.

Miss Mary Capo played the part of the sultan's favorite dancing-girl, and Julian Fant was musical director. Among the prominent young women who modeled were Miss Shirley Hartley, Miss Barbara McCarter, Miss Shirley Masters, Mrs. L. J. Moreau, Miss Gilda Riolino, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Miss Minerva Helm, Mrs. R. D. Powers, Mrs. Henry J. Two young men also took part, Paul Ray and Chester Crowell.

The Junior Service League will be host to other Leagues from all over Florida in April, in convention at the Hotel Ponce de Leon. Mrs. F. Victor Rahner Jr. will be chairman.

Another traditional event was the Officers Ball, also at the Ponce, sponsored by the Officers Club of the State Arsenal. Among those reserving tables for dinner were Major General and Mrs. Mark W. Lance, Colonel and Mrs. Harold C. Wall, Lieut. and Mrs. Karl O. Masters, Captain and Mrs. Albert W. Spiller, Lt. William Faircloth, Lt. and Mrs. J. F. Blanton Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Earl L. Mrs. John Armstrong Hart, a Winter resident here since 1924, was recent houseparty hostess to her children and other guests at her St. George Street home. The priceless collection of Hart family portraits by Sargent and other masters is housed here.

Mrs. Hart, a member of one of the distinguished old French families of St. Louis, was Miss Mary Lucas. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Buckner Barret, who lives with her, is also descended from one of the most prominent families of that region, was born Miss Adele Hart.

The Institute is devoted to better understanding of the cultures and histories of Spanish-speaking countries. A feature of its pilgrimage to St. Augustine was the presentation of the coveted Cervantes Medal to Harold Colee, executive secretary of the Florida Chamber of Commerce and head of its Inter-American Division. A native of St. Augustine, Mr. Colee now lives in Jacksonville.

The president of the St. Augustine Historical Society, X. L. Pellicer, winner of the Medal last year, acted for the Institute's beloved honorary president, Mrs. W. F. Bowers, in presenting the Medal. Mrs. Bowers, from Cooperstown, N. Y., was also at the luncheon; she has long devoted her time and funds to furthering Spanish-American relations.

Junior hostesses at the annual luncheon of the Hispanic Institute of Florida were Mrs. George Hellier, Miss Juanita Mickler and Mrs. Thomas P. Davis, until her recent marriage Miss Charlotte Vinten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Ray Vinten of St. Augustine.

Other distinguished guests were Dr. Alfred J. Hanna and his wife, Dr. Katherine Abbey Hanna, who collaborated on the book, "Florida's Golden Sands"; also the Institute president, Nelson R. Park of Winter Park, and Dr. Hugh McKean, president of Rollins College.

The Ambassador was introduced by Dr. G. Ballon-Landa of Ormond Beach, who in turn was presented by Professor Angela Palomo Campbell of the Spanish department at Rollins, a founder of the Institute.

FEBRUARY — this was really a party month. The charm and gaiety of pre-war Vienna was brought to the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel at the Viennese Opera Ball. The proceeds of the gala event went to the Cancer Research Fund of Columbia University and the Margit Bokor Fund for Cancer-Stricken Artists and their needy families. Before the ball, one of many being held all over the world to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the greatest composer — Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart — there was a large cocktail party in the East Foyer adjoining the Ballroom in honor of the Austrian Ambassador to Washington and Mme. Karl Bruger, the Austrian Minister to the United Nations and Mme. Kurt Waldheim, and the Austrian Consul General at New York and Countess Heinrich Calice. The center of attraction was a Delaunay-Belleville automobile used by Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria, which had been lent by Mr. Dowling from his famous collection of ancient and historic cars.

The ballroom color motif was pale blue and silver with the chandeliers draped in silver and table cloths and napkins of pale blue linen. The table candelabras were decorated with red and white carnations, the Austrian national colors. Following the cocktail party Mrs. Robert W. Dowling, chairman of the ball, and Mr. Dowling, the honorary guests and members of the various committees with their guests marched into the Grand Ballroom. After they were seated, Peter Mayer, who led the Blue Danube Waltz at the brilliant Philharmonic Ball which marked the formal re-opening of the Opera House in Vienna, led Mrs. Annette Woodburn in the internationally famous Strauss Waltz. They were joined immediately by other members of the Waltz Committee, headed by Mrs. Truman Talley and Mrs. Frederick Rahr as co-chairmen, and including Mr. and Mrs. Philip R. von Stade, Mr. and Mrs. James Van Norden, Mr. and Mrs. James Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lelandais, the Misses Carolyn Sickles, Sheila Ryan, Jean Tanburn, Mary Fenton Cheatham, Helen Constantino, Denise Lawson-Johnston, Eva von Felitz, Mrs. Lowell Leib, Mrs. Jinx Hefflefinger Clark and Thomas Bartle, James M. Waterbury, Henry Willard Jr., Chester Fox, Donald Foxter, Harrison Ware, Harry C. Milholland Jr., Hartley Ramsay Jr., Thilman H. Matsch, Taylor Bigdie, and Pierre de Costa-Charron.

After dinner had been served the program continued with a forty-minute program of Mozart music and arias by Metropolitan Opera stars under the direction of Robert Lawrence, the Opera Quiz Master, who served as Master of Ceremonies. Others enjoying the festivities were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Altschuler, Mr. and Mrs. Arde Bulova, Joseph P. Binns, Robert Breckenridge, Clifford de Baun, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. After months of preparation for one of the biggest events of the social season, a brilliant assemblage of those prominent in society, stage, screen and television took part in the Fifth Annual Mardi Gras Ball of the Junior League of the City of New York, Inc., held in the Ballroom of the Sheraton Astor Hotel, as a fund raising benefit to aid the League's Welfare Trust Fund. The glittering event included many entertainment features of the famous New Orleans Mardi Gras. The ballroom was decorated in pink, aqua and gold, with translucent balloons covering the ceiling. Multi-colored ribbons formed a ribbon-like canopy over the entire ceiling, gathered together in the center, from which was suspended a large crystal ball that turned, reflecting the aqua and gold. The golden thrones for the King and Queen of the Mardi Gras were set in a huge sea shell on the stage.

The highlight of the Ball was the selection, just before midnight, of the Queen of the Mardi Gras. The five candidates chosen for the honor on the basis of their outstanding volunteer work in the community were Mrs. Robert B. Cooke, Mrs. Charles S. Whitman Jr., and the Misses June Dorflinger, Dona Isabella Guimaraes and Virginia Varet Martin. During the pageant they were escorted to the Dais by John Raitt, Robert Q. Lewis, Robert B. Cooke, Bill Leonard and Gregory Ratoff. The selection of the Queen was made by the panel of judges, which was composed of Lt. General Willis D. Crittenberger, Judge John Warren Hill, and H. V. Kaltenborn.

When the judges' decision was announced, the diamond tiara which once belonged to the Empress Josephine was placed on the Queen's head by Mayor Robert F. Wagner and the Queen took her place on the dais next to Cyril Ritchard, who resigned as King of the Mardi Gras.

In the colorful pageant, preceding the coronation, there was a Mardi Gras parade displaying bizarre and striking costumes, representing the famous women in history and designed to present the trademarks of the twenty business firms that had served as sponsors of the Ball by contributing to the League's Welfare Trust Fund. The Fund aids more than 100 community agencies, settlement houses, and homes for the aged.

Many large companies were represented by novel costumes, which were worn by society mannequins in the forty-five minute pageant. Among them were Mrs. David McDowell, Mrs. Gilbert H. Gurguson, Miss Peggy Calhoun, Mrs. David Frost Bartlett, Mrs. Marshall Clark, Miss Maria Fenton Cheatham, Miss Avery Kirkwood Hallock, Mrs. Steven D. Traugott, Mrs. Casper H. Citron, Mrs. Hudson Fausett, Mrs. Frank D. Campion, Mrs. Thomas G. Wyman, Mrs. Donald Webb Dickson, Miss Helen Walsh Long, Mrs. J. Rich Steers Jr., Mrs. Vernon H. Brown Jr., Mrs. Stirling S. Adams, and Mrs. David Drew Zingg.

One of the most brilliant parties given in New York in years was at the beautiful Eden Roc Club in honor of the charming and gracious Perle Mesta of Washington, D. C. The host at the gala affair was Earl Blackwell, the originator of Celebrity Service in New York, Hollywood, London, Paris and Rome.

As part of the entertainment, Earl presented Howard Lindsay, co-author of "Call Me Madam," who introduced Billie Worth and Donald Burr, the stars of the London production. Elaine Stritch sang "The Hostess with the Mostest" from the musical.

Among the prominent guests were Henry Fonda with the lovely Baroness Franchetti of Rome, the Gilbert Millers, Mrs. Earl Warren and her lovely daughter Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Amory, Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo Banfi, Miss Tallulah Bankhead, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Binns, Michael Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Jan Boissevain, Miss Margaret Case, Count and Countess Cassini, Oleg Cassini, Stewart Chaney, Mr. and Mrs. Frank (Gladys Swarthout) Chapman, Hugh Chisholm, Dick Cowell, Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore Dali, Blevins Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Davis, Duke Umberto di San Miniato, Mrs. Temple Fielding, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Gimbel, Jules Glaenter, Miss Hope Hampton, Mrs. Lorello Hearst, Mr. and Mrs. Renaldo de Herrera, Miss Hedda Hopper, Mr. and Mrs. H. Leading UN diplomats, stars of the film, celebrities of the entertainment world, and governors of three states converged on the kleig-lit Roxy Theatre for the benefit world premiere of "Carousel," from which the New York Medical College realized more than $52,000.

Marking the first time that top executives of three states have ever attended a film premiere, Gov. Robert Meyner of New Jersey, Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, and Gov. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, were in the audience for the filmization of Rodgers and Hammerstein's hit musical, with which Twentieth Century-Fox introduced its new process, CinemaScope 55.

The following ambassadors who head their countries' delegations to the UN were present: His Excellency M. Herve Alphand, France; H. E. Arkady Sobolev, U.S.S.R.; H. E. Sir Pierson Dixon, United Kingdom; H. E. Rear Admiral Anibal Olivieri, Argentina; H. E. Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang, China; and H. E. Mohammed Khan, Pakistan. Nineteen other countries were represented by diplomatic notables.

Stars of the picture, Gordon MacRae and Shirley Jones, as well as Rodgers and Hammerstein, headed the "Carousel" contingent.

The opening followed weeks of special events, most recent of which was Times Square's first clambake, held Tuesday night at the Lobster, with the State of Maine as host. Actual carousel horses were installed in the Roxy rotunda, while a mobile carousel was stationed outside in the street.

"Carousel" is a beautiful film.

Later at a champagne supper party given by Mr. and Mrs. Spyros Skouras for the cast and friends everyone was talking about the new process, CinemaScope 55, which seems to give an added dimension to the screen. Among those congratulating Mr. Skouras on the film were Gov. and Mrs. Averell Harriman, Dorothy and Oscar Hammerstein, Sharman Douglas, Lady Pierson Dixon, wife of the United Kingdom delegate to the UN, Colombian Ambassador to the UN Dr. Carlos Echeverri-Cortes and Mrs. Cortes, Shirley Jones, and many, many others.

THE BAHAMAS COUNTRY CLUB is boiling over with activity in preparation for the seventh annual Bahamas Country Club invitational golf tournament March 22 to 25. Such names as Winston Guest, Dan Topping, Jock McLean, E. B. McLean, N. J. McLaney, Harry Daumit, Bob Sweeny and Chris Dunphy head the list of those expected to make up the 65 teams.

The week-end tourney will begin Thursday night, March 22, with the traditional Calcutta dinner at the clubhouse. Eighteen holes of golf are scheduled for each of the three following days, with, of course, the usual rounds of informal evening entertaining.

Concluding the meet will be the Sunday night wind-up party, with presentation of awards.

For those who will be making their first trip to Nassau, golfing will have to share interest honors with touring, making the native night club rounds and shopping on Bay Street. The country club itself offers plenty of activity — tennis, one of the island's most beautiful beaches, and boating and water skiing.

Meanwhile, the social set is looking forward to the annual dinner-dance of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, March 15 at the British Colonial Hotel. Usually held on March 17, the dance this year has been dubbed the "Pre-Saint Patrick's Day" ball.

Leading the roster of notable guests will be the Earl of Ranfurly, governor of the Bahamas, and Lady Ranfurly.

Speaking of balls, those who were lucky enough to have reservations for the Headress Ball in late February literally had themselves a ball, with the original headwear hitting a new high in zany and beautiful creations. Among those taking part were Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Bickley of Philadelphia, guests at the British Colonial Hotel, and their daughter, Mrs. Robert Witmer; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. McMillan of St. Louis, guests at the Royal Victoria Hotel; Colonel and Mrs. Frederick Wanklyn in their customary laugh-getting toppers.

New attendance records are being set at Hobby Horse Hall, with hundreds of visitors and residents turning out each Tuesday and Friday to see the native jockeys urge their pint-sized horses around the track. Recent visitor to the track was Leo Corrigan of Dallas, with Mrs. Corrigan. He was on hand to present the Emerald Beach Hotel cup at one recent meet. The Emerald Beach is one of his most recent hotel acquisitions, and Nassau's very newest.

Also seen at the track were Sir Oliver and Lady Simmonds, Lady Robinson and the Charles Muldaurs of New York.

Lord Beaverbrook is back in his West Hill Street home, and has been entertaining a number of visitors from England.

More interesting visitors: Mr. and Mrs. Dan Taradash at the Emerald Beach Hotel (he's the playwright for "From Here to Eternity" and the new William Holden film "Picnic"); New York restaurateur Thomas Shattuck and Mrs. Shattuck, at Cable Beach; Col. Nicholas Biddle, of Biddle, Townsend & Co., Philadelphia insurance, and Mrs. Biddle at the Windsor Hotel; Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, former Secretary of Labor, guest of Mrs. Audrey Pleydell Bouverie at her Andros Town home; the mayor of Providence, R. I., W. H. Reynolds, followed by Rhode Island's Governor Dennis Roberts, both at the Buena Vista.

Ponte Vedra

By Madolyn Borum

MY, BUT IT'S GOOD to have you back with us again" is being heard frequently at The Inn. A very sincere greeting, too, because it really is wonderful to see old friends returning for their annual Spring vacation.

Naturally, every day finds many newcomers to Ponte Vedra, but it doesn't take long in the friendly atmosphere that surrounds them, until they too acquire that feeling of belonging. With two gracious hostesses (and, charming we might add) always around, a vacation is sure to be pleasure perfect.

It's such fun to see congenial guests gathered around the bridge table, finding it hard to concentrate on the game due to reminiscing about that terrific drive made during the afternoon on No. 12, or else the group dancing in the Cactus Room trying out the latest steps perfected at the dance studio back home.

Of course, there are those exciting moments at the frequent putting contests on the new Putting Green in front of The Inn. This is especially true when the ball eases into the cup, edging out the contender for one of the prizes of the day. Recent winners of these contests have included Mrs. Allen B. Laing of Ponte Vedra; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sprigg Jr. of Smithfield, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Van Middlesworth of New Brunswick, N. J.; G. H. Walker of Roselle, N. J., and Mrs. M. G. Robins of New York City.

Perhaps two of the most excited ladies in recent months were Mrs. Betty Thornton, a local resident, and Mrs. C. M. Turman of Wyncote, Pa. They each scored a hole-in-one on the Ponte Vedra course. Mrs. Thornton blithely approached the 16th tee, the caddy handed her a 4 wood, a terrific swing and the ball rolled right in the cup. Playing with her on this 134-yard hole was Mrs. J. Peacock of the Colony.

Now, Mrs. Turman was already giving some tough competition to her foursome, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Keating of Minneapolis and Dr. Turman, when they arrived at the famous 146-yard island 9th. The 6 iron was certainly a good choice because her ball landed a couple of inches from the pin and rolled in easily. It might interest you to know that Mrs. Turman's score was 87 for the day.

Modeling what the well dressed guests and colonists are wearing at Ponte Vedra this season: top, Mrs. Jot Carpenter; second, Mrs. John Lydon, Mrs. Edward B. LeMaster and Mrs. McEachern Van Eepoel; bottom, Mrs. Albert Stoddard.

Without a doubt, this will be a long remembered vacation for both Dr. and Mrs. Turman.

Another highlight of the season which will linger in our memories is the delightful fashion show presented by the ever-so-talented Jane Fayssoux. The commentary, cleverly given by Edie Martin (Mrs. Reggie), abounded with an undefinable sparkle.

Since the show was given for the benefit of the Woman's Auxiliary of Ponte Vedra's Christ Church, it was opened by "Miss Auxiliary of 1975," the adorable Miss Mimi Brewer, escorted by Master Kurt Martin. Indeed this twosome made quite a hit with the large audience. Mimi is the daughter of Mrs. Thad Brewer and Kurt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reggie Martin.

Modeling with the aplomb of Powers models were Mrs. Ding Butler, Mrs. Walter Ayles, Mrs. Jot Carpenter, Mrs. Byron Crawford, Miss Jay Dunning, Mrs. Edwin Kimbrough, Mrs. William Evans and Mrs. deZeng Dunning.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. LeMaster, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Woolverton Jr., and Dr. and Mrs. Andy Sears were enviably handsome as they too showed the latest fashions.

Other charming models from the Colony were Mrs. Stockton Rogers, Mrs. John Markham, Mrs. Thomas White, Miss Dana Roe, Mrs. Norman Sterling, Mrs. John Lydon, Mrs. Norvin Veal, Miss Lynn Evans, Mrs. Lawrence Pearce, Mrs. Louis Kurz, Miss Suzanne Barnes, Mrs. McEachern Van Eepoel, Dick Larkin, Ralph Oswald, Mrs. Howard Bissell and Miss Joy Milam.

Closing the showing of the latest creations from the smart Jane Fayssoux shop was the finale of "Blue Streak" Fashions in which six of the models wore something blue. First was a bewitching bathing suit and finally a lovely cocktail dress executed in lace over silk.

Included in the list of vacationers displaying avid interest in the show were Mrs. J. H. Schoolfield of Knoxville, Tenn.; Miss Elsie B. Sinkler of Philadelphia; Paul Smith of New York; Mr. and Mrs. James H. Swan of Knoxville; Harry Bottome of Manchester, Vt.; Mrs. Robert S. Grant of Coral Gables, Florida (houseguest of Mr. and Mrs. Martin); Dr. and Mrs. Barnes Gillespie and Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Read of Warwick, Virginia; and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bowen of Newport News, Va.

Ponte Vedra residents in attendance included Mrs. Lewis L. Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. Dunton Howe, Mrs. H. D. Roe, Mr. and

J. C. Marvin of Forest Hills, N. Y.; Mr. and Elwood Kirkman and Miss Carol Kirkman from Absecon, N. J.

Mrs. Earl Seibert, D. V. Edmundson, who returned from his European trip just in time for the show, Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Mills, and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. LeMaster Jr.

Others from the Colony were Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Woolverton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fulenwider, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ewing Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Draper and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Brown.

With all the many pleasures afforded those lingering at The Inn and Ponte Vedra, the widespread fame of this resort is certainly understandable. From far and near come individuals and family groups to enjoy golf, tennis, swimming, fishing and all that goes to make up fun-filled hours.

Included in the list of recent arrivals at The Inn have been Mr. and Mrs. J. Warren Newkirk of Greenwich, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs.

G. M. Clements of Atlanta needed no help in catching the fish but Mrs. Clements lends a hand in showing them.

Then, too, from Remsenburg, L. I., came Mr. and Mrs. Percy N. Edwards; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Barnett of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Crump Jr., of Memphis; Mr. and Mrs. Odell W. Williamson Jr., honeymooners from Macon, Ga.; and Governor and Mrs. Preston Lane Jr., of Hagerstown, Md., and Arthur Flood, also of Hagerstown.

When the time comes (and all too soon) for the journey back home and reluctant goodbyes have been said to a departing guest, there's always that 'let down' feeling — but not for long. It's sure that they will be missed terribly but it's a known fact that very soon we'll be saying, "My, but it's good to have you back with us again!"

The Greenbrier

at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

IF COTTAGES COULD TALK, visitors at The Greenbrier could hear much about Henry Clay's political arguments, conquests of beautiful belles, the black depression of 1839, Van Buren's Summer White House, the glorious days of the "Old South," General Robert E. Lee's horse Traveller and of the great Old White Hotel, for the picturesque little cottage rows at the famed resort at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, were built by the spa's devotees in the early 1800's.

From almost the moment of Mrs. Anderson's "cure" back in 1778, the Springs began mushrooming until the spa was soon the favorite rendezvous of the nation. The first visitors to arrive to partake of the waters, pitched tents around the spring. Owner of the property at this time was a Michael Bowyer, who saw the money-making possibilities of White Sulphur Springs and constructed log cabins to rent to the ever-increasing crowds.

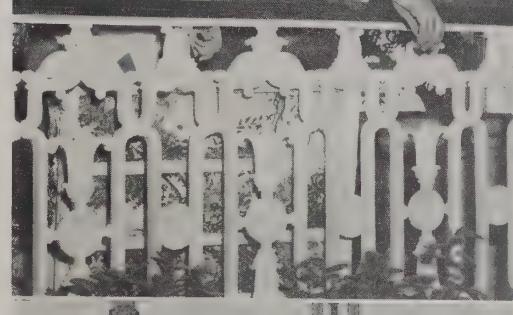

By the turn of the century, business was so good that his son-in-law, James Calwell, who took over the property upon Bowyer's death in 1808 began work on the rows, many of which are still in use at The Greenbrier today.

If one had $200 in his pocket, a goodly sum in those days, he could have his own cottage built to assure him of living quarters when he returned to White Sulphur the following Summer, for by this time it was becoming more and more fashionable to "tour the springs" and Mr. Calwell was turning away more folks than he allowed to stay.

Paradise Row, so called because it was a favorite of honeymooners, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Virginia and Florida Rows came into being. Then there were Wolf, Fly and Flea Rows, hangout of the bachelors and gamblers.

The restoration this Winter of Georgia Row brought to light many interesting aspects of construction of this era . . . even the "build" of the men of the time was evident. Not a door in the Row was over six feet high. They've been standardized for today's Texans.

When the carpenters went to work on Georgia Row to ready it for guest occupancy early this Spring, they found that the sills and end posts were mortised and held by wooden dowel pins. There were no ridge poles in the rafters and the wooden sheathing used then was cut the full width of the trees. Cut nails were used for the old construction and nails, ranging in size from four to twenty penny, have been found. An 1866 nickel and a brass key about 6 inches long were unearthed when digging a footer for a pier under one of the porches. The stately white cottages with their wide piazzas are slated to become a new favorite of the Greenbrier guest of 1956 just as they were with the Georgians of the 1830's.

Another landmark familiar to Greenbrier guests is the President's Cottage, built in 1816 by a Mr. S. Henderson of New Orleans, a frequent visitor to White Sulphur Springs. The first two-story cottage constructed at The White, this house is the only example of Federal architecture to be found in this area.

Ever since Andrew Jackson first came to White Sulphur in the 1830's, this historic resort has been the "Summer White House" of many Presidents, and several of them found accommodations in the beautiful cottage built by Mr. Henderson. This is how it became known as the "President's Cottage." John Tyler is said to have carried his bride, the beautiful Julia Gardiner of Virginia, across the threshold as he spent his honeymoon in this cottage in July 1844.

History is a little vague as to just how many of the Presidents visiting White Sulphur Springs actually lived in this cottage, but all told 13 Presidents have visited The Greenbrier: Andrew Jackson, Martin Van Buren, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor, Millard Fillmore, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Ulysses S. Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes, Chester A. Arthur, Benjamin Harrison, William Howard Taft and Woodrow Wilson.

A big building boom hit White Sulphur Springs in the 1830's. The price of cotton and tobacco was high and the Southerner, who claimed The White his own, had a lot of cash on hand. A Colonel Singleton and his good friend, Wade Hampton, considered the richest man in the South before the Civil War, built three pillared mansions which they named the Colonnades Cottages. Each occupied a cottage and the third was for guests. Here President Van Buren set up his Summer White House and his son Abram wooed and won Singleton's pride and joy, daughter Angelica. Only one Colonnades stands today.

In 1835 John H. B. Latrobe, noted lawyer, architect, and inventor from Baltimore, built a Summer home, the first residence in what became the popular Baltimore Row. Known today as Baltimore C, it attracted the attention of the entire colony at White Sulphur for it was full of new-fangled gadgets. A new South Carolina Row, also constructed in this period, and Kansas Row were patterned after Latrobe's house. These cottages have long been favorites of today's cottage colony which comes to The Greenbrier for the Summer.

General Robert E. Lee and his family spent the Summers of 1867, 1868 and 1869 in Baltimore "G." During these three Summers General Lee devoted his time, energies name a silence more eloquent than speech pervaded the enormous apartment. The old, the young, the belle, the beau, the white-haired elder, and the stately matron bowed low before the great general, the spurless knight of a cause, which though lost, was sacred."

Sporting history as well as social history was made at the Springs in the nineteenth century for, in 1884, there came into being on the "Oakhurst" estate of Russel W. Montague, which is located only three miles from the present 45-hole layout of the Greenbrier's Golf and Tennis Club, the first organized golf club in America.

The five members of this early club were met from the far corners of the world. There was Russell W. Montague, a New Englander who had attended Harvard; George Grant, a Scot who had found from himself a magnificent estate in Greenbrier County; two brothers, Alexander and Roderick McIntosh

McLeod, who hailed originally from Dalvey, near Forres, Morayshire; and the fifth member, Lionel Torrin, a young Scottish tea planter who arrived from India in 1884 to visit his uncle, Mr. Grant.

It was when Grant suggested the building of a course on which young Torrin might continue to play the grand old game they had all enjoyed in the old country that Mr. Montague generously offered his place as the site. With the help of farm hands, the first tee was built not far from Mr. Montague's home, which still stands. And so golf came to The Greenbrier, where Sam Snead now reigns as Pro.

Even the highway, Route 60, which passes in front of the hotel, has historical significance, for it follows the famous Old Buffalo Trail. It is no wonder it is said that The Greenbrier has a great American heritage. Its existence virtually spans the national existence of our country.

Recent visitors to the Greenbrier are: 1. Mr. and Mrs. John Gilliam of Shaker Heights, Ohio, who spent their honeymoon here. Mrs. Gilliam is the former Nena Miller of Chagrin Falls, Ohio.

2. Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Lawson of Columbus, Ohio. 3. Newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Robert Horan of Charleston, W. Va. Mrs. Horan is the former Cecily Bostwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bostwick of Shaker Heights, Ohio.

Lt. Gov. Frank Ross and Mrs. Ross, of Vancouver, B.C., and a large group from British Columbia, Nassau, Washington and New York were in the area to attend the recent Filberg-Foley wedding in Thomasville.

Miss Marie Scanlon Foley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Scanlon Foley of Vancouver, B.C., and Robert McCormack Filberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joseph Filberg of Comox, B.C., were married at a morning service in St. Augustine's Church, Thomasville. The Most Rev. Martin Michael Johnson, D.D., coadjutor archbishop of Vancouver, performed the ceremony and offered the nuptial mass, assisted by the Rev. Father Gerard, rector of St. Augustine's church.

The bride's attendants were her sister, Miss Fran Sandra Foley of Vancouver, maid of honor, and her cousin, Edith King Mason of Thomasville, flower girl.

Judd Whittall of Vancouver, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man.

Miss Foley wore Alice blue peau de soie, fashioned with a bateau neckline, short sleeves and a bouffant waltz-length skirt. Her headdress was of matching blue violet, and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses and mimosa. The flower girl was similarly dressed, and also carried yellow roses and mimosa.

Mrs. Foley chose a gray tie-silk dress for her daughter's wedding, and the mother of the bridegroom wore a Spring print.

The bride's wedding gown was of ivory net, appliqued with heirloom Brussels lace on the fitted bodice, and at the bottom of the very full skirt. Her ivory finger-tip veil was attached to a coronet of pearls, and her bouquet was of white camellias and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony, a reception and wedding breakfast was held at Susina Plantation, home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Roswell King.

White flowers in silver containers were used in the living and dining rooms, and pastel Spring blossoms in the other rooms of the home.

The bride's table, laid with a white cloth, held a wedding cake at one end, and an arrangement of white camellias, carnations, roses and lilies of the valley at the other.

Mrs. Filberg attended York House School, Vancouver, Miss Madeira's School, Washington, D.C., and Mills College, Oakland, Cal.

The bridegroom is a graduate of British Columbia University, did post-graduate work at the University of Stockholm, Stockholm, Sweden, and also attended the Royal Swedish Forest Academy.

Mr. and Mrs. Filberg will make their home in Comox, B.C., after their return from a wedding trip to Europe.

Out of town guests at the wedding included close friends and relatives from Jacksonville and Tallahassee and Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Filberg, parents of the bridegroom, who flew from Honolulu; Mr. and Mrs. Judd Whittall, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Foley, Lt. Gov. Frank Ross and Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Wade Tynan and two small daughters, Miss Margaretta Smith, Miss Patricia Liggett, Miss Mildred Fraser and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Scanlon Foley, parents of the bride, all of Vancouver; Miss Brenda Turner of Nassau; Miss Kay Foley of New York; and Mrs. Neil Carruthers of Washington.

Camellias, the aristocrats of Southern gardens, are much used at this season of the year in North Florida for party decorations as well as for wedding bouquets.

Red camellias and garlands of ivy were used effectively as table decorations at the annual Tallahassee City Pan-Hellenic Association luncheon.

Dr. Sam Neel, dean of men at Florida State University, was the principal speaker, and Mrs. Robert Wild of Washington, national president of Pi Beta Phi sorority, was a special guest.

Red, pink and variegated camellias, arranged on streamered rosettes made from strips of newspaper, were the appropriate centerpieces used at the Tallahassee Press Club's second annual Headliner Award dinner.

The John Kilgore Memorial plaque and the Tallahassee Democrat trophy were presented to Reeves Bowen, Assistant Attorney General, for distinguished public service "that has been too little recognized."

Glimpsed among the three hundred guests were Mrs. LeRoy Collins, First Lady of Florida, in black, the high neck outlined in ice blue satin with a diagonal satin bow; Mrs.

Red camellias in a flat silver bowl were the center arrangement at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Richardson in honor of General Bradford and Mrs. Bradford, and camellias in several colors were used at the afternoon party given for the Bradfords by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Elliot.

Valentine Gala at Whitehall — Mrs. M. Blum with clown.

By Josephine Duffey

HERE IS NO SIGN of a waning season at Whitehall. This year has been uncommonly eventful in every respect. Every day has been full, with interesting programs of social, athletic and entertainment events arranged for the pleasure of the guests.

Many notable figures have been sojourners within the portals of the former Flagler mansion.

With so many Palm Beach landmarks being dismantled or completely changed, Whitehall maintains its air of luxury and old-world charm. Henry M. Flagler was a champion of growth and progress and he would have been well pleased with the co-mingling of architecture at Whitehall.

The old mansion has been preserved intact and the newer part of the hotel rising into the sky above Lake Worth, embraces and merges with it in perfect harmony. In the mansion are seven great salons, built and decorated with the sole purpose of creating a background for art masterpieces.

The salons are built around a large, open court, a popular spot with Whitehall guests and a delightful place for dancing at tea and cocktail time. The patio is a striking example of the richness that went into the decorating of the Flagler mansion.

The central fountain and pool is done in Carrara marble and depicts the story of Susannah and the Elders. Lovely Susannah in her chaste beauty is rising from her bath with the elders peeping at her from the rim of the pool. Placed in the four corners of the patio are the heroic figures of the goddesses: Irene, Hesiode, Deesse and Thalia. These are among art masterpieces to be found at Whitehall which were collected in famous art marts of the world and brought to Palm Beach to enrich the home of the oil magnate, Flagler.

Among the many cosmopolitan guests now at Whitehall are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cohen of New York. Mrs. Cohen (Ruth Berk Cohen) is a well known interior decorator. Mrs. Cohen and her sister, Mrs. Fanny Pelz, decorated the penthouse apartment of Marion Davies at Sutton Place in New York. They recently completed the apartment of Nancy Olson, the star of "Battle Cry," and her husband, Allan Lerner, producer of "Brigadoon."

Another distinguished guest at Whitehall was Everett R. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Mr. Clinchy has been president of that organization since it was founded in 1928. He is the president and founder of World Brotherhood and is the author of several books and numerous magazine articles in the field of group relations.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Kenny are vacationing at the hotel. Mr. Kenny is the author of many popular songs, writes poetry and is the syndicated columnist of the New York Daily Mirror.

Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Rabb of Washington, D. C., are visiting the resort. Mr. Rabb is administrative assistant to President Eisenhower. Congressman and Mrs. Irwin Davidson of New York City are at Whitehall. Colonel and Mrs. Bernard L. Gorfinkle of Boston, Mass., are vacationing here. Colonel Gorfinkle is personal military aide to Governor Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts.

The smart Rib Room at Whitehall has been the scene of many dinner parties. The fine cuisine and the luxurious atmosphere combine to make it a popular rendezvous. Recently entertaining there were Mr. and Mrs. William Rolfe, whose guests were Mr. and Mrs. Nick Kenny and their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Borsten, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Goodson and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morse.

Other recent hosts at dinner in the Rib Room have been Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Boas, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Blumberg, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Goldsmith, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Neff and Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Spitzer.

Whitehall has been the scene of many benefits recently. The United Jewish Appeal, largest of the country's voluntary philanthropies, launched its 1956 nationwide campaign from Whitehall.

Art collectors sharing an interest in art are Mrs. Margaret Silberman of New York visiting with Mrs. Mira Salomon at Whitehall. They are shown examining a photograph of "The Pony-Tail Girl" by Picasso, owned by Mrs. Silberman.

Diners in Whitehall's famed Rib Room, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Bodner with Mr. and Mrs. Max Kahn.

Back When . . .

For those whose memories can't recall a time when Palm Beach didn't have a traffic problem, the above picture should prove refreshing.

Probably only a handful of the endless line of motorists passing up and down this double thoroughfare today ever saw it in the halcyon days portrayed here when a photograph could be snapped in mid-day without even a passing wheel-chair rolling across the landscape.

For 42 years ago, there was a Royal Park entrance to the Town of Palm Beach, even though the palms weren't the royal species that today line the street in stately columns.

This picture of early Palm Beach — in 1914, the Town had been incorporated only three years — is from the personal files of Mrs. Percy Peck, of 231 Peruvian Avenue, who first visited the resort the year this scene was taken to form the first colored post-card sold here.

A Winter visitor since that year, Mrs. Peck has been a Winter resident since she and her late husband built their Peruvian Avenue home in 1928. Her Summer home is in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

There were only two bridges — both wooden — leading to Palm Beach in those days, the old Florida East Coast Railway railroad trestle structure and Royal Park Bridge, whose eastern approach is shown above.

Developers of the era were apparently pre-occupied with wild life for as can be noted a concrete lion stood guard over the sign across the grass spelling out the name of the new real estate development. Crouching panthers and strange looking birds topped the ornate coral rock gateways to the plain wooden bridge.

"This was my first view of Palm Beach," explained Mrs. Peck. "A real estate man drove us over and as far as Cocoanut Row. Along the street on the right side, he offered a lot for $5,000 that I understand sold years later for $100,000."

More interesting to Mrs. Peck than the real estate tour was her first wheel-chair ride.

She recalled how Homer, the famed "Afromobile boy" for nearly 50 years here, who died last year, rode her and her three children over to the Jungle, the lake frontage on Worth Avenue in the vicinity of the present Everglades Club, where "Alligator Joe," a Seminole, used to wrestle alligators as a tourist attraction.

She attended service in the Royal Poinciana Chapel, with its congregation of some of the country's most distinguished men, guests at the Poinciana or Breakers hotels, to hear the late Dr. George Morgan Ward preach.

"Palm Beach has never been as lovely as it was in those days," said Mrs. Peck, who's seen the Town grow from these early stages through the Mizner era, the boom, the thirties, the World War II days to the present. She's lived to see the community outgrow even the concrete bridge that replaced the wooden structure of this picture, to see formal planting and precisely placed trees succeed the natural vegetation shown here; to see the Society of the Four Arts and the Embassy Apartments rise where the wooden house on the left stood in 1914, with modern shops and offices opposite.

One of the few features of those early days that has survived almost unchanged is the Lake Trail, where the homes of early settlers were located in the days before the ocean frontage was developed. Though only one or two wheel-chairs remain today, the Trail still extends Northward, inviolate to motor traffic, available only to pedestrians and bicyclists.

THE PALM BEACH BILTMORE's beautiful State Suite with its Spanish styled balcony and luxurious furnishings was a perfect setting for the three-day fishing jaunt enjoyed by the Cuban Anglers who flew over from Havana to participate in the Palm Beach-Cuba Invitational tournament.

The State Suite, one of the show places in Palm Beach, is a complete home within the hotel and the Spanish atmosphere prevailing was appreciated by the Latin island's top-flight anglers who remarked that they felt as if they were back in Havana shortly after arriving.

Havana anglers here for the tournament included Luis and Raul Aizcorbe, Raimundo Betancourt, Angel Cambo, Ramon del Collado, P. G. de Torres, Carlos M. Falla, Benjamin Garcia, Mario Gonzales, Jose Macia and G. R. Suero.

Despite the fact that the Cuban Anglers were defeated by the Sailfish Conservation Club, they had a merry time at the cocktail party given in the State Suite and later at the awards banquet at the Sailfish Club.

With the debut of March 2 and the running of the Black Helen at Hialeah, another record racing season wound up the run of the Palm Beach Biltmore race special which went into hibernation until 1957. New marks in attendance at the track and patrons of the race special were set on Widener Day, when over 42,000 race-goers converged on Hialeah and fully 850 turf fans from Palm Beach, Delray Beach and Fort Lauderdale rode down to see the great Nashua win his first big race of the season.

English royalty, as appears to be customary, dominated the royal blooded turf followers from abroad and South America — everyone turned an eye whenever Lord Carnarvon and his beautiful daughter, Lady Penelope Van der Woude, stepped aboard the Biltmore race special for their numerous trips to the track together. ## In Dual Showing at the Four Arts

THE AMERICAN NOTE is being sounded for the closing, as it was for the opening, of the Society of the Four Arts exhibition season.

Opening with "Contemporary American Painting" in mid-December, the Four Arts is now presenting for its final show the "John Marin Memorial Exhibition," regarded as the finest collection of work by America's greatest watercolorist of contemporary times.

Launched last June at the Phillips Gallery in Washington, after being assembled by a number of cooperating museums and galleries, the Marin show came here from the Minneapolis Institute of Arts and goes on to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

So vast is the retrospective showing of works of this dean of painters, who died October 1, 1953, at the age of 82, that the Four Arts has had to divide it into two sections, the first of which is now on view. Though most famed for his watercolors, Marin painted many distinguished oils, and this exhibition is made up of both, with a few drawings and etchings.

Decision to present first the 69 watercolors, four drawings and nine etchings, and the 40 oils second, was made by Allan McNab, director, and the art committee, headed by Mrs. Harold Fowler.

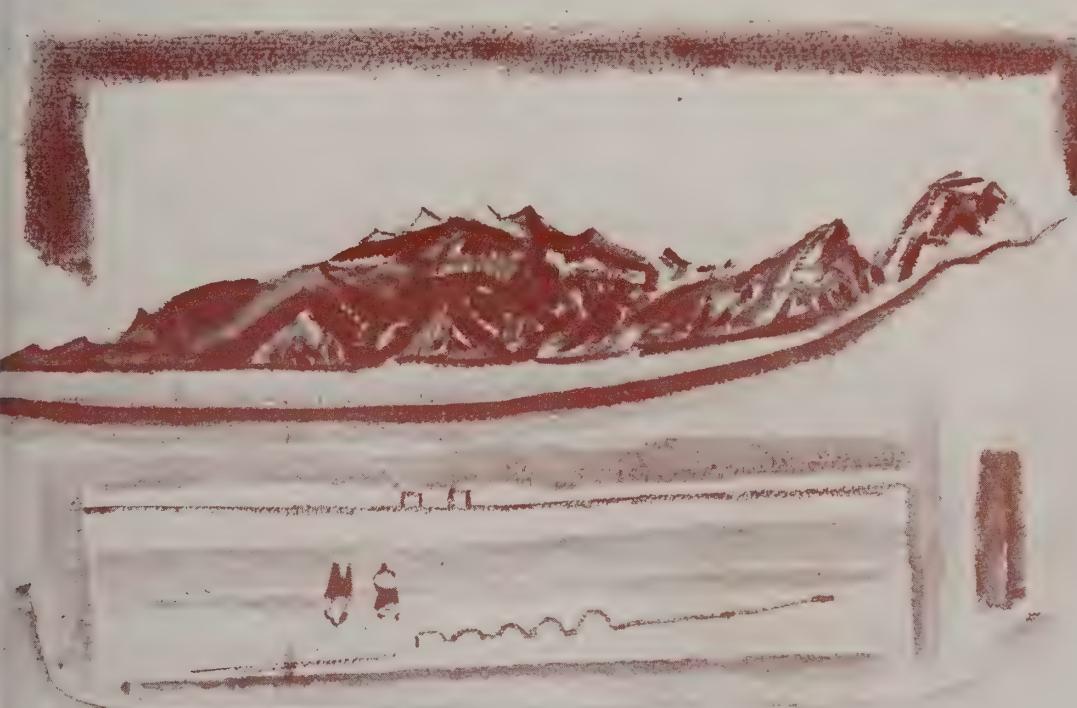

On the afternoon of March 9, a large gathering of members and guests assembled for the final membership preview tea, at which time the watercolor section filling both galleries and the directors' room was on display. It is to continue through March 20.

No preview tea will attend the launching of the oil painting section. It will simply go on view when the Four Arts opens at 10 o'clock March 23.

Easter Sunday, April 1, will mark the formal closing of the Marin show and the Four Arts' exhibition season. From 2 to 5 o'clock that afternoon, the public will have the final opportunity of viewing the oil paintings. They will all be hung in the main gallery.

The "John Marin Memorial Exhibition" was organized by the Art Galleries of the University of California, the Cleveland Museum of Art, the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, the Phillips Gallery in Washington and the San Francisco Museum of Art.

Born in 1870 in Rutherford, N. J., John Marin after years of travel and study came back to settle in New Jersey, having his home at Cliffside, but for years each Summer he explored the New England countryside and coast, and his best known watercolors are of this part of the world. He died at Cape Split, Maine.

Beginning as a freelance architect at the age of 23, he turned to painting, studying first at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the Art Student's League in New York, followed by years in Europe. Though he exhibited in various shows in this country and abroad, he was 40 years old before he had his first one-man show in New York.

portray so magnificently. These watercolors cover the entire span of Marin's professional life, beginning with a 1908 "London Omnibus" from the Stieglitz collection at the Metropolitan and ending with "The Tempest," lent by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hirshhorn of New York.

There is not a decade, and only a few years, unrepresented between 1908 and 1952. There is at least one picture for each year from 1920 to 1936. Four were painted after the artist passed 80.

When the oils go up there will be a "Weehawken Sequence," dated 1903, lent by the Downtown Gallery. Then there is a skip to "Bryant Square," 1932, from the Phillips Gallery. Indicative of his growing interest in oil painting in his latter years is the fact that the rest of the 40 all fall between 1932 and 1953, the last work being "Spring No. 1," done in 1953 shortly before his death, from the Phillips Gallery.

The drawings range from 1905 to 1942, the etchings are all early, from 1907 to 1925.

Marin has been frequently compared to such artists as Whistler, Homer and Ryder. Duncan Phillips says of him: "To each of these he has some affinity; to Whistler his ability to vignette the pictorial essence of a moment of vision; to Homer his passion for and knowledge of the sea off the coast of Maine and in his special mastery of water color as a medium; and to Ryder in his self-reliant invention and his integrity."

Of his marvelous gift for portraying nature, Dorothy Norman says: "To the very end of his life Marin retained and utilized with masterful vitality his ability to communicate magically his subtle attunement with what he liked to call the great nature forms — the great nature forces . . ."

HEITHER HOPKINS HENSEL nor his work needs introduction to Palm Beach.

Though his one-man show opening March 19 at Worth Avenue Gallery will be his first in Palm Beach, his work has been known here since 1945. During this time the young man has become an integral part of the Winter social scene, spending the seasons here with his friend, Channing Hare, distinguished portrait artist, and Summers at Ogunquit, Maine. Both artists maintain studios at both places and devote much of their time to painting.

In 1945, the young artist entered a picture in an exhibition, the Society of the Four Arts Annual, and won first prize in oils for his painting, "Acrobats." The painting was purchased by Mrs. Vaughn Spalding, who has lent it for display in this Worth Avenue exhibition.

Since that time Hensel's works have found their way into the private collections of a number of Palm Beachers, including Mrs. Duggett Benson, co-director of the Worth Avenue Gallery, Channing Hare, Miss Alice DeLaMar, Mrs. Audrey Emery, Mrs. John H. Packard, Mrs. Jesse L. Terry, Mrs. Gerard Lambert and Mrs. William L. Van Alen.

In addition to Mrs. Spalding, Mrs. Emery, Mrs. Packard and Mr. Hare have lent pictures for this show. Mrs. Terry's and Mrs.

Lambert's are in their Princeton homes and Mrs. Van Alen's in Philadelphia.

All of those owning his works, now in Palm Beach, are expected to be among the guests at the preview cocktail party March 19 at which Mrs. Benson and Mrs. Archibald C. Rayner, co-director, will honor Mr. Hensel. The show will then continue through the month at the Gallery.

Since his initial highly successful adventure into exhibiting back in 1945, the artist has held solo exhibitions in Boston and New York, has exhibited nationally in many Museum shows, including the competitive "American Painting Today, 1950," at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Whitney Museum of Art, the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, the Art Institute of Chicago, the University of Illinois, the Corcoran Gallery in Washington and other annual museum shows.

His painting "Enchanted Fragment" in this new show was shown at the Jeanne Bucher Gallery in Paris in an exchange exhibition arranged under the sponsorship of the Cultural Services of the French Embassy.

From his exhibition in 1946 at the Margaret Brown Gallery in Boston, the Museum of Fine Arts there purchased a painting for its permanent collection. His works are also included in the collections of the Museum of Art, Toledo, and that of the International Business Machines Corporation.

A native of New York City, Mr. Hensel attended Kent School at Kent, Conn., and Yale University, which he left in two and a half years to enter the United States Army. With the exception of majoring in stage design at Yale, he had no formal art training.

To an obviously great, innate talent has been added years of study and work with his friend, Channing Hare, whom he has known since childhood.

The lack of formal study seems especially surprising in one whose work would appear to reveal the hand of the most carefully trained draughtsman. His drawing and lines are impeccable. His knowledge of anatomy would seem to stem from long study. His paintings of hands are masterpieces. It is easy to discern an unerring instinct for the theatrical that is probably a combination of natural bent and training.

There is an other-world quality about most Hensel paintings. His creatures, whether human or from the bird or animal kingdom, seem to wander through a strange world of muted colors, against backgrounds beautifully fashioned from geometric planes. His figures range from mask-like creatures to delicate, satiric humans that range from circus folk to Victorian old ladies.

The exact elements that make up the Hensel style defies analysis, but for those familiar with the artist's work it comes to be unmistakable. Here are paintings of great smartness, beautiful workmanship, drama. Whether it be the strictly impersonal handsome design, "Aspiration," or the exquisitely executed character study of "The Palmist," they bear the unmistakable Hensel imprint.

Contemporary British Painting at Lowe Gallery

QPENING NIGHTERS at University of Miami's Lowe Gallery exhibition of contemporary British painting saw no pub scenes or Big Bens. Modern art fans had a field day at the 13-man showing of some-wild, some-mild paintings.

For the first time this season, a Lowe exhibition was opened formally with speeches and special guests. What more perfect speaker for this show than British Consul Denis Hennessey?

Consul Hennessey laughingly asserted, "Your director, Robert Tyler Davis, has done only a fifty percent job by having me open the exhibition. To open it properly, one should be British and have a knowledge of art. I happen to be British, but I know nothing of art!"

UM President, Dr. Jay F. W. Pearson, added a few words of thanks to the Gallery for their fine exhibitions.

The formalities over, Gallery members and guests got down to the serious business of finding the "Laughing Man." The controversial painting by Francis Bacon inspired much conversation . . . no one could find the Laughing Man.

Mae Knight Clark, textbook writer for MacMillan publishers, and Marjory Stoneman Douglas were among the first to view the painting. Mrs. Clark decided the laughing man was a clown who'd collapsed as the curtain fell, and Mrs. Douglas declared "I just don't know."

Ida Barker, wife of UM art professor Dr. Virgil Barker, thought that the laughing man wasn't even in the picture. "We're the laughing men," she said, as she and her husband laughed over it.

Another of Mr. Bacon's paintings attracted attention. "Innocent X," a huge oil, was the favorite of Robert Draper, president of Miami Artist Association. The MAA sponsored the secondary exhibition in the rear room of the Gallery.

Judy Kniseley's painting of three angels was hung there. (Her pimento dress exactly matched her painting's main color). Miss Kniseley attended with her former teacher, Miami artist Richard Merrick, a UM art professor.

Rachel Beal, assistant director of the Gallery, buzzed through both rooms all night, making sure buyers were taken care of. Mrs. Beal is the wife of K. Malcolm Beal, who's a UM professor of English.

Beaux Arts member Rita (Mrs. Robert) Searle did her punch-serving stint with Betty Ann (Mrs. Herbert) Johnson, and Jean (Mrs. Henry) Bryant, also Beaux Arts members.

Betty (Mrs. A. Louis) Brown, who's president of Beaux Arts, sipped punch with Louise (Mrs. Arthur) King. Louise is one of the teachers for the Saturday children's art classes at Lowe Gallery.

spected Tristram Hillier's painting "Apples on a Table, No. 1." Both Schippers are doctors of philosophy and teach at UM. "Apples" caused quite a bit of comment during the evening. They were unbelievably real-looking, even at extremely close range.

Others at the opening were Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Muller (he's a French professor), Mrs. George Farkas, who's an art photographer and has had a one-man show at Lowe, Larue "Sunny" Storm, Mrs. Frederic Merritt, Mrs. Robert Rowley, Mrs. E. V. Hjort and Margaret Smith.

The British exhibition closed on March 4. Currently showing at Lowe Gallery are paintings by Paul Gauguin.

Boca Raton Hotel and Club

HANK COHEN

Surprise model at a "million dollar party" is a very young native of Africa who should feel somewhat reassured by one familiar fashion note, the Oriental silk sheik's turban worn by a Neiman-Marcus model at the Boca Raton Club and Hotel.

HANK COHEN
Tennis "great" Fred Perry, a former world's singles champion, gives a few pointers on the game to a Boca Raton Club and Hotel guest while the TV camera grinds. Like that other famous Boca Raton sportsman, golfer Tommy Armour, Perry is often the subject of sports feature newsreels.

T. P. WYATT
A kiss and a wish for good luck are bestowed upon youthful poloist Glenn Allen by his mother, Mrs. W. Cottingham Allen of Delray Beach. Glenn is captain of the "A" team of the recently formed Boca Raton Club Pony Polo League. Average age of the midget poloists is nine.

El Embajador

Benediction

Another hotel in the Ambassador International Hotel System is blessed

The formal Benediction of the Hotel El Embajador in Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, at which Monsenor Octavio Beras, Archbishop of Santo Domingo (left) officiated. Other dignitaries shown above, from the left: Generalissimo, Dr. Rafael L. Trujillo Molina, Benefactor y Padre de la Patria Nueva; Sr. Jesus Maria Troncoso, minister without portfolio; the man wearing the double-breasted suit was unidentified; General Hector B. Trujillo Molina, President of the Dominican Republic; Monsenor Salvatore Sino, Papal Nuncio; Dona Maria Martinez de Trujillo, First Lady of the Republic, has her back to the camera.

WHEN THE HOTEL EL EMBAJADOR was ready to throw open its doors to the public in Ciudad Trujillo in the Dominican Republic, the massive structure, instead of a formal party, was blessed by the Catholic Church.

Considered one of the finest, and probably the newest of the fine hotels in the vast West Indies chain of islands, the El Embajador today is able to offer superlative service to traveler or Winter visitor to the Dominican Republic.

Prince D. Djordjadze, who stopped briefly at the Colony Hotel in Palm Beach last Winter with his bride, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley, when they were enroute to Nassau for their honeymoon, is the resident manager of the latest Ambassador International Hotel.

Seen at the formal Benediction of the Hotel El Embajador in Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic recently. Prince D. Djordjadze, who stopped briefly at the Colony Hotel in Palm Beach last season with his bride, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley, is resident manager of the El Embajador, an Ambassador International Hotel. From the left, above, Mrs. William T. Pheiffer, U. S. Ambassador William T. Pheiffer, both of whom are well known in Palm Beach; Princess Djordjadze and Prince Djordjadze; Vincent Impelliteri, former Mayor of New York City, and James Hagen, well-known American contractor who is building a 150-mile highway in the Dominican Republic.

Generalissimo Trujillo in the Marine Corps almost thirty years ago, attended the opening of the El Embajador. The President's and Miss McLaughlin's engagement is the greatest romance on the Island.

"As quite a few residents of Palm Beach are coming over here, this event might represent a certain amount of interest for the Winter residents of Palm Beach."

The following persons who have been visitors of Palm Beach attended the inauguration: United States Ambassador William T. Pheiffer and Mrs. Pheiffer; Minister without Portfolio and former Dominican Ambassador to Washington, Sr. Manuel de Moya Alonzo and Sra. de Moya; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pawley, former United States Ambassador to Brazil; Col. ## Knights of the Wine Cup Meet in Washington

Gracious living and the art of gastronomy, in danger of becoming extinct in this jet-propelled era, got a boost recently at the annual chapter dinner of "La Confrerie des Chevaliers du Tastevin" (The Brotherhood of the Knights of the Wine Cup) held at the Hotel Statler in our nation's Capital.

This organization, which traces its origin back to Rabelais, took six new members into the fold at the Statler dinner. Pictured above are Clifford T. Weihman, grand senechal of the Knights (left) and French Ambassador Couve de Murville, who look on as Jules Bohy hangs the wine-tasting cup around the neck of new member Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Frank W. Ewing. Other new confreres included Spanish Ambassador Areilza, United Service Associates President Bedell Monro and John Shields of Johnston and Lemon.

YACHTING in Palm Beach Waters

By Frank Rohr

THE HALCYON MID-SEASON WEEKS were a time of continual arrival and departure for Palm Beach yachtsmen.

At the Australian Avenue docks, William McKelvy's new Trumpy-built cruiser, the 80-foot radar-equipped "Rumak III," arrived some weeks ago.

"Mrs. McKelvy and I have been commuting on "Rumak" between here and Miami since our arrival," said Mr. McKelvy. "We're extremely pleased with our new home afloat."

The McKelvys plan to live aboard in Palm Beach until late March.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Bates also moved aboard their 65-foot cruiser, "Full Moon," at the Australian Avenue dock for several weeks of waterway sunshine.

The 109-foot luxury yacht, "Maid Marion" of Detroit, was a welcome if late arrival at the foot of Australian Avenue. Her owners, the C. H. Bliss' of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., joined the boat at Charleston and cruised down with her to Palm Beach. Since arriving, they have sailed with various guests on short cruises in nearby waters. The Bliss', who entertained Mr. and Mrs. Harley Earle of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. A. Bradley of Greenwich, Conn., in February, will remain on board until April 1.

The handsome heavyweight cruiser, "Gay Adventure," owned by Mrs. E. T. Montgomery of Washington, D. C., cruised from her Australian Avenue berth to Hobe Sound and Miami in February. Mrs. Smith, who flew to Washington for medical care in February, rejoined her vessel later that month.

At the Brazilian Avenue docks, the trim 48-foot cruiser, "Skookum," returned in mid-February after steaming to the Anglers Club in Key Largo for a week's stay with her owner's guests, Judge F. McMahon of New York, N.Y., and his party. Owner Joseph Reiley of New York joined his boat for a month of Palm Beach's marine pleasantries in February.

The popular 50-foot cruiser, "Huns Buddy III," belonging to John H. Richards of Philadelphia, Pa., sailed February 8 for a 10-day cruise to Key West with Mr. Richards' son and daughter-in-law, the G. W. Richards of Philadelphia, Pa. The younger Richards arrived at the Everglades Club early in February for a two-week stay.

A brand new Trumpy-built beauty, the 67-foot cruiser, "Silver Mist," owned by H. W. Stone of York, Pa., arrived at her Brazilian Avenue slip January 22. The Stones, who entertained their two sons and daughters-in-law on "Silver Mist" early in February, plan to live aboard till March 10, and in the Spring repeat their January cruise to Key Largo.

The gleaming 53-foot "Marjane III" was joined by her owner, an ex-senator from New Jersey, Mark Anton of West Orange, N.J., in February for two weeks. Soon after arriving, Senator Anton cruised to Miami and back with his wife and daughter.

The designer-builder of so many of Palm Beach's handsome houseboats, John Trumpy of Annapolis, Md., arrived late in January at the foot of Brazilian Avenue aboard his own Trumpy-built voyager, "Aurora IV." He and Mrs. Trumpy sailed immediately for the Keys with their guests for a week's exploration and relaxation. They expect their son and daughter-in-law, the Donald Trumpys of Washington, D. C. at the end of March.

Palm Beach's loveliest and most active windjammer, the 60-foot Alden yawl "Josephine III," owned by Thomas T. Petzold of Detroit, Mich., sailed to the Bahamas in mid-February for her third two-week cruise. With Mr. and Mrs. Miles O'Brien of Detroit aboard, she visited Bimini, Nassau, and Elutherea Island.

At her outside Brazilian Avenue dock berth, the 75-foot handsome and supremely homey houseboat, "Marana," was joined in February for better and for best by her owners, the Edward W. Coppages of Palm Beach, and their young daughter, Anita.

"We like her so much, I don't think we'll ever live in a house again," said Mrs. Coppage.

Mr. Coppage, president of the Florida Lawn Tennis Association, plans to cruise "Marana" North to Longport, N. J., this Spring.

J. D. Rucker's sleek 73-foot cruiser, "Marcoura," left from her Palm Beach Yacht Club slip for Marathon and Dinner Key late in January with Mr. Rucker and his guests aboard. Mr. Rucker, of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., who lives aboard "Marcoura," took her to the yard February 11 for a week of minor repairs.

"Dragon Lady," the beautiful blonde 77-foot ketch owned by W. A. Parker of Boston, Mass., returned to the Palm Beach Yacht Club at the end of February from a month's voyage in the Bahamas with Arthur Metcalf of Boston and his guests aboard.

That Texan giant, the 112-foot "Cosa Grande," owned by Daniel Braman of Victoria, Texas, cruised to Miami from the Palm Beach Yacht Club in February for several days, with Mrs. Braman and her guests aboard.

The Sailfish Yacht and Beach Club boats were occupied recently with the Club's private fishing contest, which continues until springtime, and the Silver Sailfish Derby.

Frank Laiser's 36-foot cruiser, "Butterball," fished with the winner of the Henry Chanin trophy for most women's releases, Mrs. Gustave Schirmer of Greenwich, Conn.

Her runner-up, Mrs. Constance Gulbenkian of Larchmont, N. Y., fished consistently and successfully aboard her new 35-foot sea skiff, "Capricorn."

Other boats active in Sailfish Club competition and independent sport were "Vael," owned by Allison Fleitas of Wilmington, Del., and Epcos, owned by Fred Englehorn of Newark, N. J.

Another Sailfish Club stalwart, the 40-foot Johnson, "Cassandra II," owned by T. Lykes of Tampa, fished with two of America's most famous professional sportsmen in February: baseball's Ted Williams and golfdom's Sammy Snead.

"Carola," the massive 121-foot houseboat owned by Col. Leon Mandel of Chicago, left her Biltmore Hotel berth for a week's trip to Jacksonville, where Mrs. Mandel entered an annual skeet shooting contest.

Perfect tropic weather and lavish hospitality attended yachtsmen and their friends during this mid-Winter of Palm Beach boating.

Cockpit crowded with guests, the gleaming 48-foot Vineyard "Huns Buddy III," owned by John H. Richards of Philadelphia, Pa., ripples Lake Worth's waterway as she cruises from her Brazilian Avenue berth for a day's cruising. A familiar Winter visitor, "Huns Buddy III" is kept active by Mr. Richards, who spends the season in Palm Beach.

“The years seem literally to lift away” ELIZABETH ARDEN

GIVE 5 Minutes a Day!

TAKE 5 Years Away!

ELIZABETH ARDEN'S FIRMO-LIFT TREATMENT

ELIZABETH ARDEN's Firmo-Lift Treatment asks only five minutes of your time daily, plus the uplifting touch of your own two hands, to help you lift, firm and smooth your maturing skin; to help erase wrinkling, sagging, puffiness and heaviness . . . those tell-tale signs that reveal the secret of your age.

For Firmo-Lift is the special Salon treatment that Miss Arden has adapted for your own use at home, to aid you in improving the elasticity of your skin and the vital tone of your supporting facial muscles.

Firmo-Lift is the basic reason why the exquisitely-cared-for clientele of Elizabeth Arden Salons look far younger than their years.

Press on! Mould in! Work up! These are the three commandments of the Firmo-Lift ritual. Follow it religiously, daily. The Treatment Lotion, a blend of restoring, toning oils and astringents, and its companion benefactor, Special Salon Treatment Oil, seem literally to lift your years away.

To accelerate Firmo-Lift's benefits, supplement your treatments with vitamin-enriched Ardena Perfection Cream. You will find the results immensely rewarding.

CHRYSLER WINDSOR V-8 4-DOOR SEDAN—BIGGEST BUY OF ALL FINE CARS

THE YEAR-AHEAD CAR

There's more that's new in Chrysler than in all other competitive cars combined!

All new styling . . . longer body . . . sensational Pushbutton Drive Control . . . New Highway Hi-Fi . . . revolutionary new Brake System . . . concealed exhaust outlet . . . Instant Heating System. These are most of the new and newsworthy advances that have made the headlines since the new models came out—all of them are exclusive with Chrysler in its price class!

Not to mention the airplane-type V-8 engine and full-time power steering . . . major advances which Chrysler has had for years . . . and which competitive cars still don't have.

Compare the newness of the "Power-Style" Chrysler with the other cars in its price class. See if it isn't the only really new 1956 car . . . with more new car enjoyment for you now, more re-sale value when you want to trade it in. Yet, if you are going to buy any medium-priced car . . . even a "low cost" car with all the optional equipment . . . you can own a bigger, brawnier, more powerful Chrysler Windsor V-8 and pay no more—probably $1000 less than you think! See it at your Chrysler Dealer's.

YACHTING in Palm Beach Waters

By Frank Rohr

PALM BEACH YACHTSMEN were blessed with the best of all late Winter weather in February and March. Days were long and warm and lovely. And as the season lengthened, cruising and fishing voyages became more ambitious.

The sportsmen at the Sailfish Yacht and Beach Club, in addition to entertaining a host of Cuban anglers in their inter-club fishing tournament in mid-February, sent some members to the Bahamas.

"Lark" cruised to Bimini for a three-week fishing and skin-diving trip with Kenny Kroehler of Chicago, Ill., brother of "Lark's" owner, Dell Kroehler of Chicago.

The 32-foot Sea Skiff, "Yen-a-Gen," owned by Donald Curran of Palm Beach, cruised to Bimini, where she was joined by her owner for a week's sailfishing.

The big Rybovich-built "Butterball," owned by Frank Laiser of Palm Beach, went across the Stream to West End in the Bahamas to fish lonelier waters for a week.

Edgar Latham's "Milmar" followed the "Butterball" to West End with her owner and his guests, R. Schmid and Gilbert Drake, all of Palm Beach.

"Epcō," the Matthews cruiser owned by Fred Englehorn of Newark, N. J., returned from a cruise to Marathon Key with the John Strongts and the Steve Kijacks of Newark, N. J., who caught a boatful of kingfish down among the Keys.

Another Keys visitor was "Nonaym IV," owned by J. P. Seeburg of Chicago, Ill., who visited the Ocean Reef Club with his family on a five-day cruising and bone-fishing jaunt.

A newcomer to the Palm Beach Yacht Club, the 98-foot cruising houseboat, "Genie," owned by Colby M. Chester of Greenwich, Conn., cruised leisurely to Key West and headed up the Florida west coast, visiting Naples and Ft. Myers. She finished her cruise of Southern Florida by crossing Lake Okeechobee and returning to Palm Beach on the Inland Waterway. Early in March, "Genie" returned to the Keys with Mr. Chester and his family.

That seafaring 77-foot ketch, "Dragon Lady," owned by William Parker of Boston, Mass., returned in mid-March from her second visit to the Bahamas with friends of Mr. Parker aboard.

The clean-cut "Kinnereth," a 50-foot sports cruiser owned by Sol Brodsky of Croton-on-Hudson, returned to the Palm Beach Yacht Club from her second trip to the Keys early in March with the owner and several guests aboard.

A fitting representative of her state, the 112-foot cruiser, "Cosa Grande," owned by Daniel Braman of Victoria, Texas, returned from a Daytona boatyard in March to prepare for her late Spring cruise to the Bahamas with Mr. Braman and his family.

Commodore Harold Vanderbilt's mighty ketch, the 90-foot motor-sailer, "Versatile," of New York, cruised to Miami from her Yacht Club slip for a long week-end with her owner and his guests.

That lovely leviathan of the Biltmore Hotel dock, the 121-foot yacht, "Carola," owned by Col. Leon Mandel of Chicago, Ill., cruised to Miami for a two-week visit with Colonel and Mrs. Mandel aboard.

One of the prettiest houseboats at the foot of Brazilian Avenue, the 55-foot Trumpy-designed "Clare H. IV," owned by Harold E. Heermann of Philadelphia, Pa., cruised to the Keys. After visiting Key Largo, she continued around to Florida's west coast and returned to her Palm Beach slip via the Lake Okeechobee waterway. The Heermanns and their guests, Judge Cullen Gainey of Philadelphia and Mrs. Gainey, were aboard.

John Trumpy of Annapolis, Md., visiting Palm Beach aboard one of his own designs, the 67-foot cruising houseboat, "Aurora IV," sailed to the Keys for two weeks with Mrs. Trumpy and their son and daughter-in-law aboard.

"Josephine III," the lovely 60-foot Alden yawl owned by Thomas T. Petzold of Detroit, Mich., sailed from her Brazilian Avenue berth Yachts in Garrison Bight, Key West.

OLIVER GRISWOLD

March 15 for her third two-week cruise to the Bahamas. Aboard were Mr. and Mrs. Petzold and their guests, the W. F. Harringtons of Newcastle, N. H., and the Lloyd Ecclestons and Mrs. H. G. Petzold of Detroit, Mich.

One of "Josephine's" neighbors, the sturdy 52-foot motorsailer, "Last Buccaneer," owned by Louis A. Ferguson of Lake Forest, Ill., sailed for a two-week cruise to the Keys. Sun and fun were the "Buccaneer's" only pursuits until mid-March, when Mrs. Ferguson, publicity director for the International Women's Fishing Association, returned to Palm Beach for the IWFAs bass tournament.

The dashing 42-foot sports cruiser, "Ba Boy II," owned by Morton Fetterolf of Philadelphia, Pa., steamed to the Florida Keys and the Florida west coast for a week's fishing and cruising with Mr. Fetterolf and his guest, Max Ott of Boston, Mass. "Ba-Boy II" also recrossed the state through Lake Okeechobee.

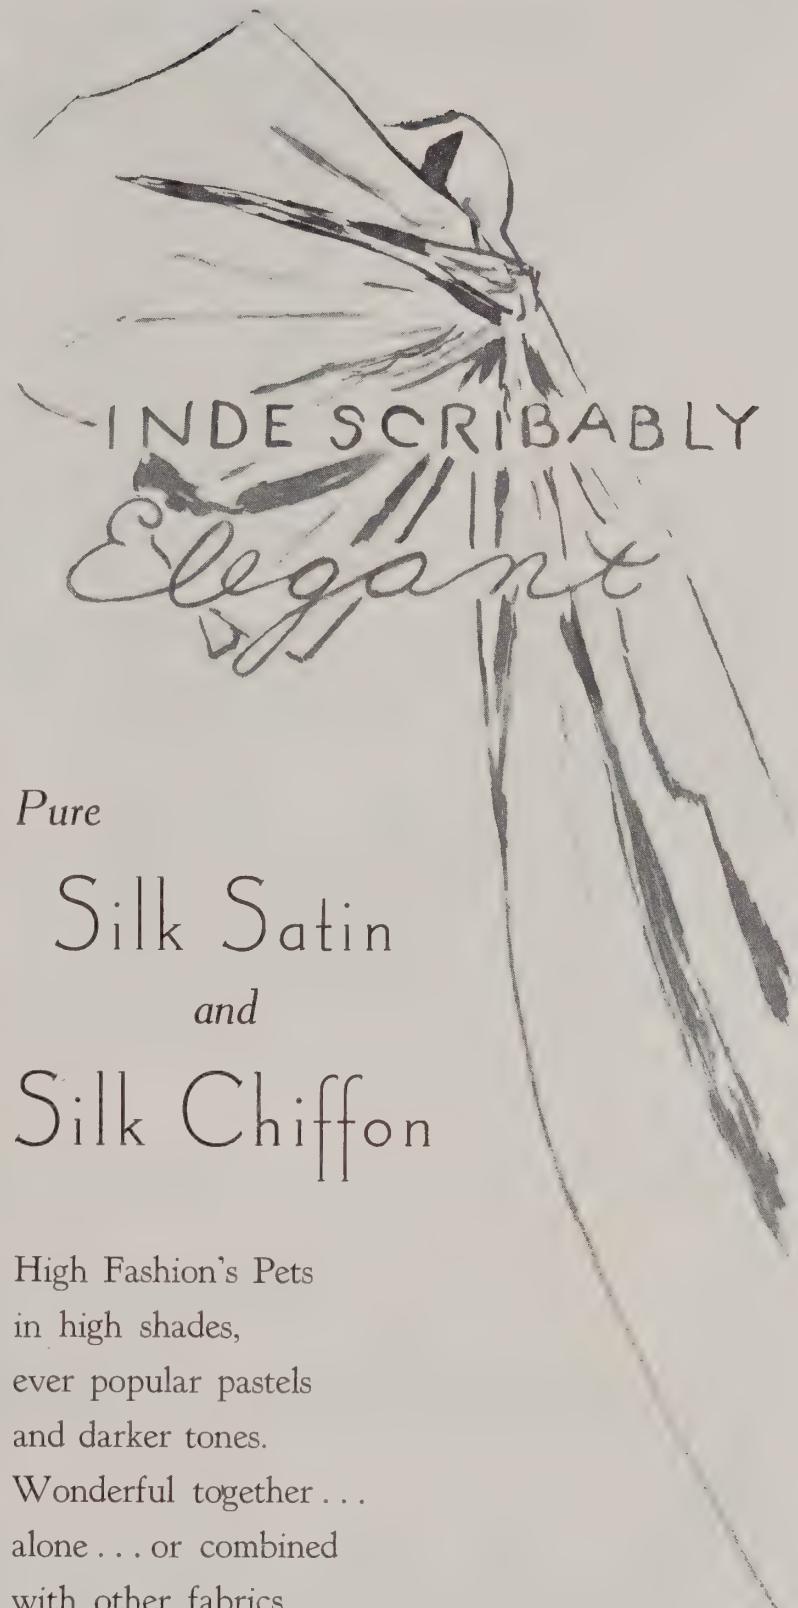

The 42-foot Matthews, "Vicaries," owned by V. C. Drieske of Evanston, Ill., cruised to Hobe Sound from her Brazilian Avenue berth for a short visit with her owner and Mrs. Drieske.

One of the Australian dock's busiest boats, the sleek 60-foot "Rumak II," cruised to Miami with her owners, the William McKelvys of Pittsburgh, Pa., on board. The McKelvys, who flew home shortly after their trip, returned to Palm Beach and "Rumak" early in March.

The mighty 109-foot diesel yacht, "Maid Marian," owned by C. H. Bliss of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., cruised to Miami with Mrs. Ruth Bliss and her guests, Mrs. A. Meisner of Grosse Pointe Farms, and Mrs. V. Smart of New York, N. Y., aboard. Mr. Bliss, who flew to Detroit, returned to his "Maid Marian" early in March.

The grand old "All Alone," the 95-footer owned by Lynde Selden of New York, N. Y., cruised from Australian Avenue to the Keys for an extensive five-week trip early in March with Mr. Selden and his guests aboard.

The gliding season, which seems just begun, is almost over. And all boat owners will regret it. If Winter comes to Palm Beach each year in this guise, yachtsmen need never worry how far behind the Spring may be.

Spending their first vacation at Royal Palms Inn, Phoenix, Arizona, are a large group from St. Louis, Missouri. Pictured on the grounds of the Inn are the Oliver Berwines, Frank B. Joerlings, L. Langeneckerts, and William H. Franks.

WHILE CACTI are found in nearly every State in the Union and have even crept as far North as Canada, Arizona could rightly be nicknamed "The Cactus State" for here can be found seventy-two species of cacti. The expression, "the lowly cacti" is a misnomer for cacti are among the most complex of all plants. They are functional almost to the point of perfection for they have developed the means to stand the hottest sun and can go for months without a single drop of water. Frost does not frighten them and they do not need rich soil and fertilizer to maintain life. Any old sand patch or rocky mountain ledge will do. In spite of this fact, cacti produce the loveliest of blossoms.

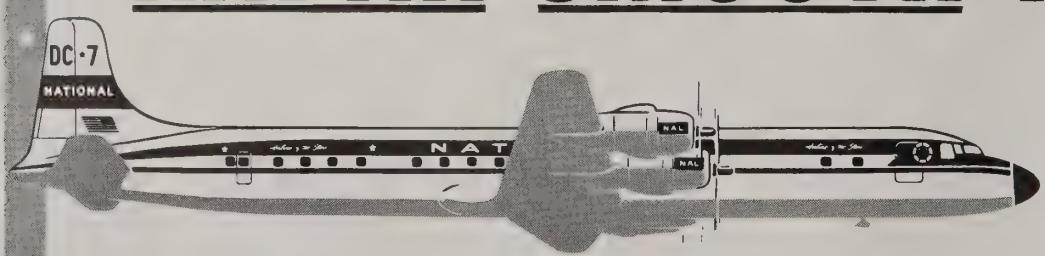

Among former guests who have returned again this year are Dr. and Mrs. J. Paul Altheide from St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Charles Adleta and Mrs. Jack Foxworth from Dallas, Texas; Mrs. George Weiss from Greenwich, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Goes from Milwaukee, Wis.; and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Reid from Chatham, N.J.

Newcomers to the Inn who enjoyed their first rodeo include Messrs and Mmes Paul Fox and William Palmer of Scarsdale, New York; W. W. Baldwin of Elizabeth, N. J.; Charles Murphy of Old Brookville, N. Y.; G. F. Waples and Harry Brown of Milford Dela.; Dr. and Mrs. Fred Olds of Alpena, Mich.; the Fred Goodwin family of Kansas City, Missouri; and Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Mebane Jr., of Knoxville, Tenn.

The annual St. Patrick's Day masquerade dance this season featured the theme "Come as an Advertisement." Guest who participated included Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bauer of San Francisco; the

Mr. and Mrs. G. Norman Knaus of Syracuse, N. Y., at The Breakers, where they have spent several Winters. Mrs. Knaus has a beautiful soprano voice and was heard at the morning services at The Royal Poinciana Chapel. In past years, Mrs. Knaus also gave an annual recital in the Regency Room at the Everglades Club in honor of Mrs. H. Winfield Chapin of Syracuse, who is a Winter resident of the Club.

Manhattan, too, always has a large and representative group spending the Spring here.

Entertaining at The Breakers is so easily and beautifully done that very many parties are given by guests and by members of the villa colony, or from other hotels. Facilities of the Terrace Garden, Bar and Starlight Room are augmented by the Magnolia Room, where many cocktail parties are given, and the great Ballroom, where the season's largest cocktail party and reception were given by Mrs. Alexander M. Paul to welcome her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Dee of Lynn, Mass., who lately returned from a honeymoon abroad and came here to visit Mrs. Paul.

On the same day, Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Z. Gearhart of Reading, Pa., gave a cocktail party in the Magnolia Room. Dr. and Mrs. Gearhart have been coming here for many years and have a host of friends. Commemorating his 50 years of medical service, Dr. Gearhart received several citations, one from the U. S. Government, this season. Mrs. Gearhart is one of the top women golfers here, playing daily. The women's weekly tournaments held on Tuesdays and the Wednesday putting matches always find her among the participants.

The Blue Room, adjoining the Terrace Garden, is favored by many for their cocktail parties. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Doerschuck of Brooklyn were hosts at one for 50, and another was given by Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lee of St. Louis soon after. Others were given by Mr. and Mrs. Chester M. Braham, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Haverfield, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lee, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Harris, Mrs. A. M. Lynn, for the Southern colony, Mr. and Mrs. C. Runcie Clements and Mr. and Mrs. Paschal G. Shook of Birmingham, Ala. Others are being planned for March, but the great party of the year, from the masculine standpoint, is the St. Patrick's Day Buffet in the Magnolia Room at which William E. Fitzgerald of Troy, N. Y., with Mrs. Fitzgerald a season guest here, gives for some 200 men. That evening in the Terrace Garden the annual St. Patrick's Ball is

As EASTER NEARS and desert Springtime becomes a reality, vacationers at colorful Camelback Inn find themselves absorbed in a busy whirl of activity, for now the sun shines a little longer for that extra few holes of golf before the purple twilight shadows the surrounding desert, and the crisp edge of night is disappearing. This is the time for outdoor activities, under a canopy of millions of stars . . . all close enough to take a handful.

Easter and Spring on the desert are one . . . the peace and tranquility of the occasion, matched by the rugged beauty and vastness of the open spaces. Budding cacti bursting into color are made more striking by the wonder that such plain and thorny plants could bear the lovely blooms. As Easter comes, the desert itself is an expression of renewed hope and assurance that all is right with the world.

This is a time of the year for many families to return to Camelback Inn, a colorful oasis cradled between rugged Camelback and Mummy Mountains to enjoy their Easter time in the peace of the desert.

For young and old, alike, it is a special occasion, with timely events for the children and parents.

Soon to be enjoyed are the Easter Ball and later in April a Spring Ball out under the stars on the terraces. Also on schedule in the near future is the annual Desert in Bloom golf event, and the Jack Rabbit Putting Tourney.

New arrivals are quickly absorbed in the busy whirl of activity if they desire. After breakfast, many are off to the spectacular fairways of Paradise Valley Country Club adjoining the Inn and scores may vary as they try to beat the total of the previous day, but there is no variance in the brilliant sun, sapphire skies, and dry air that add to the pleasure of the moment.

Dusk is the time for festivities to begin at the Inn and many have been planned by the guests, themselves, to honor prominent acquaintances. Two fêtes honored governors attending the executive committee sessions of the National Governors conference. The James McDonalds of Hastings, Neb., hosted a cocktail party to introduce their former governor, Val Peterson, now Federal Civil Defense Administrator. A large group of North Dakotans gathered for cocktails and luncheon at the pool to pay tribute to Gov. Norman Brusdale.

A gala party was planned by the Thomas McKennas of New York City, medical text book publisher, on his birthday. Many distinguished New York personalities attended, some Inn guests, and Vacationing in the warm Winter sun at famous Camelback Inn near Phoenix is the Henry Saxman family of Latrobe, Pa., where Mr. Saxman is secretary-treasurer of Latrobe Steel Co. The children were busy with Hopalong College activities, a unique sun school program which provides a full schedule of pack trips, swimming, tennis, outdoor activities for vacationing youngsters while parents relax. "Chip" (in hat), Pete and Anna received diplomas signed by their favorite, Hopalong Cassidy, for their participation in college events.

some who have acquired Winter homes on the desert nearby.

Charles McCuen, recently retired as head of General Motors Research Laboratories, and Mrs. McCuen, too, were among the hosts and hostesses entertaining large groups.

Daylight hours are spent sunbathing or the more ambitious are taking advantage of the many sports world opportunities offered. March found the Spring baseball season in full swing with the Baltimore Orioles at nearby Scottsdale, the Chicago Cubs, New York Giants, and Cleveland Indians playing full schedules.

Racing enthusiasts, the Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitneys and the Herbert Simpsons, Chicago, were among the many who took advantage of the new recently opened Turf Paradise and its Turf Club.

Tennis, too, is coming in for its share of attention. On hand for two weeks, currently, with their five children, are John Ireland and his wife, Joan Dru, as their Paradise Valley Racquet Club nears completion for a May opening. Don Budge will be in charge. And at the Inn, Aleco Noghes of Monaco has arranged exhibition matches with tennis notables.

But golf is still number one on the hit parade for most of the vacationers who occasionally take a day off to root for their favorite ball team. Probably the most avid fairway followers are

A tense moment in one of the putting tournaments at Camelback Inn is reflected in the faces of the gallery watching play on the lower nine. The wide open vistas, framed by stately cacti, native trees, and the rugged mountains are a typical Camelback Inn setting.

Lifetime Treasures fill Haiti's Shops

PORT AU PRINCE — Vacation shopping in this bargain-crammed capital of Haiti can mean bringing home lifetime treasures.

Here, handmade mahogany furniture sells for plywood prices, exciting oil paintings by gifted, self-taught artists are as low as $35, and wood sculptures that are real works of art range from $7 to $25. Adding years-long distinction to any home are the handspun cotton and handloomed fabrics and rugs. Counterparts of the latter now decorate the United Nations buildings in New York.

Getting a solid mahogany coffee table or desk back home poses no problem. Pan American World Airways' low cost Clipper cargo service makes the total outlay for such items still a third of the U.S. price. Coffee tables are tagged from $10 to $25. Desks are as low as $50. Moreover, U.S. customs regulations allow American residents $500 worth of duty-free goods every six months provided they have spent 12 days abroad, or a $200 exemption every 30 days if their trip outside the U.S. lasts 48 hours.

Many tourists, unfamiliar with these facts, confine their buying to mahogany salad sets. These include gleaming 12-inch or 14-inch salad bowls costing $6.50 to $8.50; matching individual bowls at 60 cents apiece, and a set of servers for 65 cents. Mahogany trays and bookends are also favorite purchases, ranging from $1.50 to $6.50.

Haiti is an agricultural country and sisal is one of its chief exports. This product is made into attractive handbags and hats as low as $5 a set. Bedroom slippers and beanies cost from 75 cents to a dollar. Luncheon sets are under $2.

Items in rush fiber and straw also abound. Gay hats, in all sizes, and perfect for beach or gardening run from 70 cents to $2.50. Eye-appealing and practical baskets fit every purpose — picnics, marketing or as wastepaper containers. Large ones that give a decorative note to hall, sun porch or even living-room, disguise their use as laundry hampers. All may be bought for less than $3.

Native dolls, some atop the ubiquitous burro, run from 50 cents to $2.50.

A sure-fire favorite with feminine tourists are gold-threaded raffia flats which cost $13 in the U.S. and sell for $4.50 in the Caribbean republic.

Haiti now is virtually a free port. Two years ago duties on French perfumes, brandies, liqueurs and wines were slashed from 42 percent to five percent. Last October the Haitian legislature cut duties to five percent on a number of items coveted by tourists. As a result Swiss watches are $10 to $250, petit point bags from $10 to $60, Kislev gloves, $6 a pair. Swedish crystalware, English china, and German cameras are approximately a third less than the Stateside price.

Many a woman refurnishes her wardrobe in Port au Prince. Hand-embroidered dresses range from $15 to $65; blouses from $3.50 to $22, and skirts from $6.50 to $25. Men are just as eager to buy the sports shirts with gay Caribbean designs that sell from $3.50 to $7.

An exciting addition in Port au Prince stores is handmade copper and brass jewelry with voodoo motifs. Sample prices are: earrings, $1.75; necklaces, $6.50 to $15; bracelets, $4.50 to $12.50, and cuff links, $1.50 to $5.

Practically no tourist leaves Haiti without several bottles of perfumes when a half ounce bottle of "Femme" is $8 in contrast to $15 plus 10 percent luxury tax back home, "Arpege" is $5 a half ounce instead of Uncle Sam's $12.50 plus tax, and a half ounce of "Joy" is $14 instead of $25 plus tax.

Perfume costs even less in historic Cap Haitien, a major sightseeing goal on the north coast of Haiti.

Palm Beach Winter Colony

By Wilma Spencer

PALM BEACH is at its loveliest in the early Spring. That is when soft breezes of the Atlantic waft the stately palms . . . fragrance of orange blossoms scent the air . . . brilliant colors of the flowers and foliage combine with verdant lawns to make Palm Beach a paradise.

This is the time of the year when more garden and poolside parties are given, the time for the annual Carousel of the Woman's Guild of the Church of Bethesda-by-the-Sea, benefit balls, engagements, and Spring weddings.

There were several engagement announcements! One was of Miss Diana Parish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Laurence Parish, of "Casa Esmeralda," El Bravo Way and Rock Ridge Farm, Brewster, N. Y. Miss Parish is a senior at Middlebury College, Vermont. Her fiance is a graduate of Milton Academy, Massachusetts, and Middlebury College and is now in the U.S.N.R. at Bainbridge, Md.

Another engagement was that of Miss Yvelyne de Marcellus, attractive daughter of Comte and Comtesse Henri de Marcellus, of Crescent Drive, and Nigel Trevor Marix, son of Air Marshal Reginald L. Marix, C.B., D.S.O., R.A.F. (retired) and Mrs. Rodney Nickalls, Chesterfield House, Mayfair, London, England. Miss de Marcellus' parents announced the betrothal at a tea and cocktail party at their Palm Beach home.

A recent wedding in Palm Beach was that of Mrs. Mary R. Vosburgh of Cleveland, Ohio, and James A. Bohannon, of Palm Beach and Mentor, Ohio. The couple went to Montego Bay, Jamaica, on their wedding trip, after which they returned to their Winter home on South Ocean Boulevard.

There have been many interesting personages in the resort. Among them H.R.M. Princess Astrid, Norway's First Lady, who has been the guest of Mrs. Charles Ulrick Bay at her home on North County Road. The Princess was accompanied by Mrs. Carl Otto Lovenskiold of Oslo, an old friend of Mrs. Bay. Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm T. Munthe Morgenstierne and Mme. Morgenstierne of Washington, D. C., also have been recent guests of Mrs. Bay.

Mrs. Perle Mesta, former Minister to Luxembourg, came down from Washington to address the Palm Beach Round Table and was the guest of Mrs. Merriweather Post during her stay in the resort. Other recent guests of Mrs. Post included Their Excellency, the Swedish Ambassador and Mme. Boheman, of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Sigourney Thayer, who also spoke for the Palm Beach Round Table, Miss Betty Beale, Mme. Julio Heurtematte, also of Washington, and Miss Billie Burke of Hollywood, Calif.

General and Mrs. Mark W. Clark came down from Charleston, S. C., to spend a few days with Nathan Cummings at his home on North County Road.

Prince Pierre de Monaco was in the resort for a few days as the guest of Mrs. Audrey Emery at her home on El Vedado Lane.

Governor Dennis J. Roberts of Rhode Island came down for a brief vacation and was a guest at the Embassy Apartments. While in Palm Beach Mr. and Mrs. Harold Church Paull entertained with a dinner in his honor. The Paulls also gave a tea for Lady Robinson of London and Nassau, who was their guest for a few days.

RAY HOWARD

Mrs. Edward James May and infant son, Jamie, of Pittsburgh, Pa., spent a fortnight with Mrs. May's mother, Mrs. Edward E. Bartlett and Mr. Bartlett, at their home on Jungle Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ainsworth Eyre have been entertaining as their guests at their home on Via Vizcaya, Mrs. Eyre's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hurt of Houston, Texas, and also Mr. and Mrs. Persifer Frazer of Washington, D. C., and Newport, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert of Washington, D. C., and Atlanta, Ga., were in the resort for a Spring holiday, staying at the Brazilian Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Ector Munn came down from New York to visit Mr. Munn's sister, Mrs. Lawrence Waterbury, at her home on Pelican Lane.

Dr. Elwood E. Rice arrived from New York for the late season and is at his top tower apartment at the Everglades Club.

Mrs. Philip Christopher Kauffmann, who has been at "Villa Fabius," her villa in Cannes, France, for most of the season, has opened "Mi-Estrellita," her home on El Vedado Way.

Count Medolago Albin, vice president of Cartier, international jeweler, came to Palm Beach for an indefinite stay.

Coming home for Spring vacation are eight young girls who have spent much of their growing up years in Palm Beach and who now have chosen to make their bow to society together.

Youth will be served at the Everglades on this occasion, for though about 100 friends of the parents have been invited, the great bulk of the guest list of 400 or more will be the boys and girls home also for Easter vacation from school or college.

Each of the debutantes will be allowed two official escorts to serve as a floor committee, and each is to have the first dance

Secrecy still veils plans for the decorations.

Each of the debutante will be honored at a dinner party preceding the gathering in the Gardens. Mothers will take turns with two in the receiving line with the white-clad debutantes at all times until the line breaks up and the dancing begins.

Meyer Davis is returning to Palm Beach to head his orchestra for the dancing.

Eleven o'clock, rather than midnight, is the witching hour when the young honorees and their friends will assemble from dinner parties to open the formal presentation.

GENTER OF ACTIVITY in the Bahamas will shift from Nassau to George Town, Exuma, the first weekend in April, for the third annual Out Island Regatta.

From April 5 to 8 yachtsmen from throughout the world will gather at the picturesques resort area to watch Bahamian natives compete with their working sailboats.

Fishing smacks, trading schooners, tiny passenger sloops and cargo boats — all island-made — will be skippered through the no-holds-barred course races by men whose families have for generations made their living from the sea.

About 300 yachtsmen are expected to be on hand to watch the fun. This regatta has become so popular with sportsmen that the annual weekend has turned into one of the outstanding social events of the year in the Bahamas.

J. Linton Rigg, retired American yacht designer and broker, fathered the regatta, which is sponsored by a group of enthusiastic backers whose contributions have kept the event growing every year. In the approaching races, the third annual, more than 100 native boats are expected to compete for the prizes of merchandise and cash.

The Cruising Club of America will have its first official Winter rendezvous at the regatta, with 25 to 30 yachts expected. Members of this No. 1 yachtsmen's cruising organization come from throughout the states and Canada.

Among visitors to the regatta will be George Arents Jr., of Stamford, Conn., aboard his "Xanadu;" Mr. and Mrs. William Collins of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., on their "Seabird;" Mr. and Mrs. Boris Lauer-Leonardo (he's editor of Rudder Magazine) on the chartered "Empress;" Col. Arthur W. Herrington, president of Indianapolis' Mar-mon-Herrington Corp. and commodore of the Out Island Squadron (regatta backers and boating enthusiasts), aboard the chartered "Seal;" Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wimpfheimer of Stonington, Conn., on the "Manatuck;" Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Worthington of Coconut Grove, Fla., on the "Hurricane" and Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Mitchell of Annapolis, Md., on their "Finisterre."

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Richmond, Va., will have two boats, the "Vesta" and the "Blitz IV." Others include Mr. and Mrs. Van Campen Heilner of Hampton Bay, Long Island, one the "Sly Mongoose;" Rodman Page Jr. of Philadelphia on the "Fish Hound;" Edward C. Page, also Philadelphia, on the "Courageous;" Hugh Matheson of Miami, Fla., on the "Smuggler;" James B. Lewis of Beaver Falls, N. Y., on the "Little Salt" and Herbert Humphreys of Memphis on the "Wilda II."

Early this month visitors and residents were treated to one of the all-time greats in Nassau, the biggest and most elaborate Red Cross fair to date.

The gardens of Government House were transformed into a small village of thatched hut boothss offering cooked foods, native produce, plants and flowers, marine items, gifts and gadgets, refreshments and a few games transplanted for the occasion from the Bahamian club, Nassau's casino. There were even antiques for sale, and for those who wanted to sip a cool drink under the palm trees, there was the traditional Sloppy Joe's bar, complete with cabaret singer.

Sir Sydney Oakes and Lady Oakes were among the volunteer shopkeepers, as were the Baroness von Hoyningen-Huene, Eunice Lady Oakes, Arthur Vernay and Mrs. Robert Holt.

The police band serenaded throughout the afternoon, and one of the most excited children there was Lady Caroline, daughter of the Earl of Ranfurly, governor of the Bahamas, and Lady Ranfurly.

Climaxing the day was a candlelight supper under the stars, an event of the fair which has become so popular reservations were impossible to get a week before.

As a result of the benefit, the Bahamas

Red Cross coffers were swelled by almost $25,000.

Final plans were released recently for the exclusive multi-million dollar resort being constructed on the south shore of New Providence island — Coral Harbour.

Twelve miles across the island from Nassau, the fabulous new area will include complete yachting facilities, canals, islands and several miles of beach frontage, as well as a limited number of residential waterfront lots.

By early next season, the Inn and Club will be ready for business.

Included in the plans are luxury accommodations, restaurants and bars. Many of Nassau's stores will have shops in the new center, and there will be a swimming pool, tennis courts, sun terraces and a putting green.

Surrounding the center will be a community of homes.

In charge of construction is C. F. Wheeler, vice president of Carl G. Fisher Corp. and president of C. F. Wheeler Builders, Inc., of Miami.

Recent Nassau visitors have included Judge and Mrs. Bernard A. Frank of Miami, honeymooning at the Emerald Beach — she is the former Marion Colby of Broadway and TV; John Daly of "What's My Line," with Mrs. Daly, at the Royal Victoria; cartoonist Bill Mauldin and his wife, at the Racquet club and then at a Soldier Road apartment; Dr. and Mrs. L. T. Armstrong of Toronto, at the Bahamas Country club; honeymooners Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Williams of Waterbury, Conn., at the Windsor Hotel; Mr. and Mrs. C. Richard Newpher of University Heights, O., at the Pilot House Club; Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Williams of Candlewood Isle, Conn., at the Prince George, and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Tatlow of Scarsdale, N. Y., at the Royal Victoria.

From New York and Rhode Island, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bigler are at the Royal Victoria.

At the Emerald Beach have been Walter Hendl, conductor of the Dallas Symphony orchestra, and Mr. and Mrs. David Bofinger Jr., of Haworth, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Lyons of Houston (he's president of Union Oil).

Honeymooning at Brazilian Court Hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fitzgibbons of New York City. Mrs. Fitzgibbons is the former Patricia May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell May Jr., of Bronxville, N. Y.

From Pittsfield, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bradley vacationed at the Brazilian Court Hotel.

"Duck's Nest" . . . Palm Beach's Oldest House A Pre-Fab

By Emilie Keyes

ANYONE WHO THINKS pre-fabricated houses are as modern as air-conditioning, probably will be surprised to learn that a residence believed to be Palm Beach's oldest, was brought down in sections from New York before 1891.

A big "91," entwined in rope design on the gable topping "Duck's Nest's" lake front entrance, establishes the year the house was assembled here by the late Henry Maddock, grandfather of the present owner, Paul L. Maddock.

The house stands just north of the picturesque structure, once the early Church of Bethesda-by-the-Sea, now a private home.

The name stems from the way in which ducks formerly flocked to this part of the lake each Winter in early days. Paul Maddock recalls how as a boy he used to row through the ducks that would settle on the fresh water lagoon east of the house to the family bathhouse on the ocean.

"Duck's Nest" is very close to his heart. Not only is it tied up with his boyhood years, but the task of restoring and remodeling the house has been his favorite avocation for a dozen or more years. His major problem . . . to make the house comfortable and functional from 20th Century standards without detracting from its Victorian character. The result . . . an exterior of beauty and charm . . . an interior in which reminders of the Gay Nineties have been supplemented but never entirely supplanted, by modern day features.

There are two outright concessions to the mid-fifties . . . a paneled bar, evolved from what was once a dressing-room and the salt water pool and Victorian bathhouse.

Of the original 15 rooms, a number have been lopped off; those remaining from 1891 are recognizable from the vari-colored glass rectangles in each window, a feature responsible for an early belief that the house was the Bethesda rectory.

Fascinating details harking back to the era of "ship's carpenters" architecture . . . fish tail scalloped shingles . . . pointed finials topping each gable . . . tongued and grooved construction . . . perfectly fitted coins visible on the front facade . . . painted paneled walls . . . a second floor fireplace with triple sided mantle . . .

"Duck's Nest" today from the lake front side looking Eastward, showing remodeled original house in center with Screen Room, at right, topped by remodeled bedrooms on second floor.

A "91" entwined in rope design over the middle gable establishes the date of "Duck's Nest" in this picture taken about 1897 when the house was in its original state. Sidney Maddock, father of Paul L. Maddock, present owner, is shown at left and Henry Maddock, Paul's grandfather, who bought the pre-fabricated house and brought it to Palm Beach, is at right. Some visiting English cousins are shown on the lawn with the two.

Original furniture lives happily and attractively side by side with pieces of modern, simple design. From the heritage of the ages . . . the white painted teakwood stand, ornately carved in the dining-room . . . the chairs of the same wood with their original stainy patina in the study . . . white reed chairs and tables recalling early Royal Poinciana days.

Among the original rooms are the lake-front living-room . . . the dining-room made from a one-time bedroom . . . the kitchen, modern in equipment but retaining its entrance to an eight-foot cellar below . . . the second floor master bedroom on the lake side. Also on that floor, in keeping with the smart custom of that early day to include one foreign room, a large bedroom has been constructed in the French Provincial manner.

Known now as the Screen Room, an open air sitting room has been created from what would be the modern equivalent of loggia. Markings on the concrete floor show where the original part of the house ended. Once latticed, full length openings are now protected with long windows. A barbecue grill in the former open fire place is the one strictly modern touch.

The house was fabricated either in Brooklyn or on Long Island, according to the present owner. When erected, the only access was from Lake Worth. This condition continued when he was a boy and his parents, the Sidney Maddocks, used "Duck's Nest" as a Winter home.

His father had taken the house over from the estate and the family continued to occupy it each season until the 1925 fire that destroyed the Breakers and Sidney Maddock's Palm Beach Hotel on the lake front. After that he never returned to Palm Beach.

The house stood, deserted, damaged by storms, empty and neglected through the years. Sidney Maddock died in 1936 and his son bought in the house, built a 1,400-foot causeway across the east lake to connect the place with County Road, across property his father had previously deeded him. In 1942 the Town made a fill with the causeway serving as dike.

The task of restoring and remodeling "Duck's Nest" had hardly gotten under way when Mr. Maddock went into the Navy. First made usable in 1943, it was rented by Mrs. Julia Ellsworth, who occupied it each Winter until her death.

Back from the Navy, Mr. Maddock took up the task again of reconstructing "Duck's Nest" closer to his heart's desire. He's been at it ever since, devoting much of each Summer to the job. This year it has been occupied for the second consecutive season by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Pratt Frost of Easthampton, L. I.

A love of Palm Beach, especially its lake front, is a natural heritage for Paul Maddock, whose grandfather, a retired English industrialist, started coming to Florida in the Eighties, acquired the lake front on which "Duck's Nest" stands in about 1886. The name of Sidney Maddock was tied up with Palm Beach development from early in the century to his death. Paul Maddock's first trip South was at the age of two months. He was a Winter resident from then on, has made it his permanent home for years. In 1949 he bought another historical residence, the Henry house south of the church, built also in the Nineties, and restored it as his family home.

LHE FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT-DESIGNED Industrial Arts Building at Florida Southern College at Lakeland was dedicated March 9 in honor of the memory of Lucius Pond Ordway Sr., father of Dr. Lucius Pond Ordway of Palm Beach.

Dedication of the ultra-modern structure, which Mr. Wright has described as one of the most beautiful building he has ever designed, took place at Convocation as Florida Southern College celebrated its 71st Founders' Week.

Before the bronze plaque was unveiled, Dr. Ordway presented the beautiful educational building to Dr. H. E. Wolfe, St. Augustine banker and business executive and chairman of the college's Board of Trustees.

Dr. Wolfe in turn presented the building to Dr. Ludd M. Spivey, president of the College since 1925, who then presented it for dedication to Bishop John W. Branscomb of the Florida Methodist Conference.

The impressive structure, the largest of the Wright-designed units built at the college to date, is of concrete, steel and glass and it houses the Fine Arts Section, Industrial Arts Department and Home Economics Departments at the Lakeland educational institution.

Several years ago, Dr. Ordway was the "Leaders of Florida" banquet speaker at Florida Southern's annual Founders' Week Celebration, and he holds an honorary doctor of laws degree from the college. Mrs. Ordway is an honorary alumna. The banquet speaker was Governor Collins.

The Ordways were guests of honor at a formal dinner given by Dr. and Mrs. Spivey at The Cadet. Trustees, past honorary chancellors and other distinguished Founders' Week guests attended the dinner event, after

at the Stephen Foster Memorial on the Suwannee River

FOUR YEARS AGO THIS SPRING, a wooded bluff overlooking the world's most-sung-about river, the Suwannee, became the site of the first Florida Folk Festival, inaugurating a program which has become more fascinating and more significant year by year.

A few weeks hence, on May 4, 5 and 6, many thousands of Visitors to the Florida Folk Festival this May will have the opportunity of riding over Foster Memorial park trails in jeep-drawn Conestoga wagon replicas like that above. Wagons of this type carried gold hunters westward in 1849, with Foster's "Oh, Susanna" as their theme song.

These communal get-togethers, like peanut-shellings, corn huskings and log rollings, still are popular in some rural areas of the state. Last: Youngsters attending the Florida Folk Festival are thrilled with the chance to talk to a Creek Indian in front of the Stephen Foster Museum.

Floridians and visitors from other states will congregate again on the banks of the Suwannee at the Stephen Foster Memorial for the fourth annual presentation of the now classic event.

Spectators will see and hear an amazing and colorful show, spread over seven performances in three days, with from 1500 to 1800 participants during the period.

Fabric of the festival comes from the peninsula's rich history under five flags, and the performers are helping to keep alive the folk traditions which are in reality the unwritten and unsigned biography of Florida's people and which link the present with the far distant past.

Singly and in groups, Floridians of many races, creeds and colors present their folk songs, dances, instrumental music, legends and other lore on the banks of a romantic river, helping to preserve the traditional expressions which reflect life as it has been lived in Florida, in the United States and in many other countries around the globe.

The varied programs under tall pines and mossy oaks bring together from over the state many colorful figures, most of them amateur performers with very special talents.

Frequently a group of Seminole Indians from deep in the Everglades will open a program with tribal chants and an authentic rendition of the green corn dance.

Then square dancers will take over the open air stage, while sprightly fiddle music fills the air.

There may be a musical saw selection, followed by a harmonica band, or by a cowboy song with guitar accompaniment.

Rhyme reciting rope skippers from a nearby Negro school may make the stage vibrate with some of the nimblest footwork to be seen anywhere.

The sweet music of a Mormon choir or of a group of shape-note singers adds a religious note to a program.

Then a story-telling time frequently is scheduled, a period when superstitions, rhymes, folk tales, riddles and ghost stories enthrall the listeners.

Oft-times group singing ends a program, with scores of performers and thousands of spectators joining voices in a patriotic number or a Stephen Foster melody.

The festival's keynote is simplicity, in keeping with the sylvan setting and with the atmosphere of the Foster Memorial.

The event is sponsored by the Stephen Foster Memorial Commission, in cooperation with the Florida Federation of Music Clubs and the Florida Folk Festival Association. Festival dates are chosen to coincide closely with National Music Week.

There is a continuous search for participants in the festival, by sponsors and by the festival director, Miss Thelma Boltin of Gainesville.

An example of a festival "find" last year was a 105-year-old Negro woman, born a slave, who took her place on the shady stage to tell in a firm voice what "the Old Time Religion" has meant to her during more than a century of living.

Miss Boltin, herself a master teller of folk tales, has an abiding belief in the importance of the folk festival movement, which is growing around the United States.

"Folk festivals," she says, "are a mighty answer to standardized, assembly-line entertainment, so prevalent in these days of rapid communication. Furthermore, they are democratically significant because they promote tolerance and better understanding between neighbors whose race or religion may differ."

She believes that the folk festival idea is particularly significant in Florida, where the nation's history began many years before the Pilgrim Fathers landed on Plymouth Rock.

"Florida is new, yet Florida is very old," Miss Boltin will remind you. "Florida is a maze of time, people and good living. Florida is just about everything you can think of. Mostly Florida is paradise."

"Many people think of Florida only as a land of beaches, sun, easy living and play. Florida is this — but is also many things more."

"It is a land which inherited its culture from the many tongues of its forefathers. Tongues of many faiths and nationalities. Florida is richer in its cultural heritages than perhaps it is in its sun, its beaches and play."

"Florida was not always a land of fun and glamour. Once upon a time Florida was a wilderness — but a wilderness of beauty ready to be developed. The development took a great many people who worked long, tedious hours, tilling the soil, clearing forests and building palmetto-thatched huts in which to live. These people sang in their leisure hours. They danced, and they told tales reminiscent of their day. They slaved by day and sang and danced by night. They fought, they laughed, they loved, but above all, they worked at honest labor."

"It is these people, these pioneers of a great state, whom we wish to recognize in the annual Stephen Foster Memorial Florida Folk Festival. It is their dances, their songs, tales, customs and traditions which we want to revive, and which we must preserve, or the rich heritages of our forefathers will be lost to our children forever."

"The many nationalities, customs and creeds of the pioneers of Florida are not unlike the facets of a cut jewel. It takes all these facets to make full brilliance. In the span of the festival we have had many representatives of these facets. As we grow, we will add many more, for only through complete participation of all peoples can the jewel of Florida sparkle in the full brilliance of our rich, cultural heritages."

Tallahassee and the Plantation Country

By Dorothy Burt Johnson

THE ECHOES OF APPLAUSE have resounded from Tallahassee's seven hills in recent weeks — applause for the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, for the Kilenyi-Dohnanyi piano concerts, for the winners of the George Washington Birthday Golf Tournament, for Miss Patricia Malloy, the one hundred and twenty-first May Queen.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra played three concerts in Westcott Auditorium at Florida State University to appreciative audiences of students, faculty and townspeople.

Seen among the many attending — Mrs. A. B. Martin, wife of the vice-president of the University, in French blue lace, worn with a pale pink wrap; Mrs. W. B. Moore Jr., in rhinestone-studded black taffeta; Mrs. Robert Davies in aquamarine lace; Mrs. Ivan Johnson in square-necked black crepe; Mrs. William Slaughter in turquoise chiffon; Mrs. Julian Proctor in brilliant red brocade; Mrs. Frank H. Stoutamire in steel-blue quilted taffeta; Mrs. H. Lawrence Smith in pale beige with a swirling skirt.

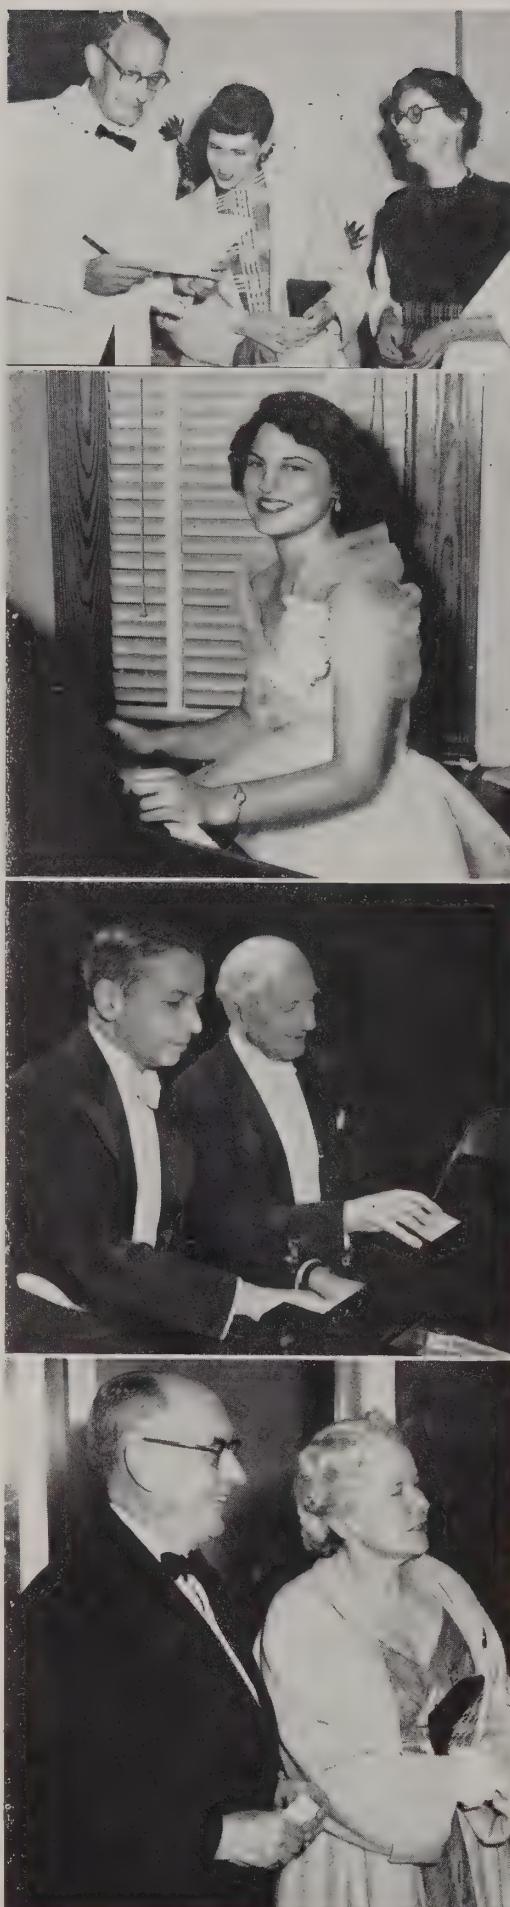

Antal Dorati, conductor of the Orchestra, paid tribute to Dr. Ernst von Dohnanyi at the last concert of the series. Dohnanyi, internationally known composer and pianist, is a professor of music and composition at Florida State University.

At the conclusion of the program of Brahms, Rossini and Bartok, Dorati said to the audience, "At last I have the opportunity to pay tribute to a great musician from my country. Ernst von Dohnanyi and I were born not far from each other — he a few years earlier than I. He held all the music of Hungary in the palm of his hand — he played for us Beethoven as it had never been played before — and he taught us new music and made it meaningful to us — just as he is doing now, for you. You are very lucky."

The Orchestra then played Dohnanyi's "Wedding Waltz," from the ballet, "Veil of Pierrette."

Brahms music was played by Dohnanyi and Edward Kilenyi at their two concerts given in Opperman Music Hall at the University. Kilenyi is professor of music at Florida State, and a former pupil of Dr. Dohnanyi.

The duet was in accompaniment to a vocal quartet, composed of Edith Kamp and Walter James of the University faculty, Doug Sanders of Miami Beach won the annual George Washington Birthday Golf Tournament at the Tallahassee Country Club. Sanders also won the championship last year. This was the first repeat victory in the ten year history of the tournament.

Runner-up was Art Butler of Portsmouth, Me., who is doing graduate work at Florida State University.

Bob Shave, a student at the University, was winner of the B division of the championship flight.

John Berry received the Jimmy Nelson Award, in recognition of his selection as the Tallahasseean who contributed most to the good of golf in 1955.

"Symphony of Seasons" will be the theme of the pageant for the 1956 Tallahassee May Party on May 2. This is the oldest annual festival held in Florida, and has been continuous, except for the Civil War years, since its beginning.

Tradition places the first of the May Parties in 1833. It is held in Lewis Park, in downtown Tallahassee, under the May Oak, a centuries-old live oak tree.

Queen Patricia Malloy, Leon High School senior, and her eighteen attendants were elected by members of the tenth, eleventh and twelfth grade classes of the school.

Miss Malloy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Malloy, was a Homecoming sponsor for the school this year, is accompanist for the senior mixed chorus and for the Melodears, girls' vocal group, and is a member of the Anchor and Philharmonic clubs.

The Queen's attendants will be the Misses Marjorie Kent Williams, Roberta Ashmore, Charlene Bell, Judy Benedict, Sandra Calhoun, Jane Collins, eldest daughter of Governor and Mrs. LeRoy Collins, Judy Culbreath, Grace Marie Fisher, Nancy Lou Fraleigh, Dot Jordan, Norma Lee Keyes, Mary Ann Lehmann, Charlene McDougald, Joye Malone, Mary Lynn Patterson, Patty Ryerson, Lea Starry and Earline Welch.

May Party escorts, chosen by members of the Court, are Mike Oksenberg, Hans Wagner, Gene Mills, Harris Parkman, Donnie McCreary, Bob Crooks, Robert Marshall, Joe Williamson, Booker Moore, Jimmy Apthorpe, Albert Yancey, Lloyd Griffith, Klein Wigginton, Buford Teston, Charles Johnson, Charles Forehand, Royal Mattice, Bob Carnes and Larry Adkison.

Mrs. Mahan gave a tea in their honor, including in the guest list friends from Thomasville and Tallahassee, as well as from Monticello. Mrs. Mahan was assisted in greeting guests by Mrs. J. B. Cooksey. Mrs. Robert Murdock and Mrs. A. N. Watson served at the tea table.

Recent Tallahassee party hostesses have been Mrs. Millard Davidson, Mrs. J. T. Kelly, Mrs. Thomas D. Bailey, Mrs. Clayton Bailey, Mrs. Wilbur Marshall and Mrs. Mitchell Ferguson, all of whom entertained at various informal affairs honoring Mrs. Owen Reilly and Mrs. Merrick Dowell of Columbia, S. C. Mrs. Reilly was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Millard Davidson, and Mrs. Dowell visited Mrs. Joe Malone.

Parties for Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dozier of Memphis, Tenn., guests of Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Dozier, have been given recently by Mrs. J. H. Theme of the thirtieth annual convention of the Federated Garden Clubs, held in Tallahassee March 20, 21 and 22, was "The Garden Club's Role in Florida's Development."

Mrs. John R. Parkinson of Daytona Beach is president of the State Federation, which includes 254 Garden Clubs, with 651 circles. About a thousand delegates, representing the 24,000 members, were in Tallahassee for the meeting.

Included in the many activities at the convention were a reception at "The Grove," temporary Governor's Mansion, a tea at the Tallahassee Garden Center, a tour of Killearn Gardens and of Covington Gardens, a flower arrangement show, an exhibit of awards and books and several luncheons and banquets.

Mrs. Frank D. Moor was convention chairman, assisted by Mrs. Walter Keyes, president of the Tallahassee Garden Club, Mrs. Ernest Cason, Mrs. C. F. McLeod and Mrs. O. C. Collins.

In production at the School of Music of Florida State University is the opera "Carmen," to be presented during May by the Choral Union. Two all-student casts have been selected to sing on succeeding nights in Westcott Auditorium.

Leading roles will be sung by Charlaine Weeks of St. Petersburg, Wendell Bartholff of Jacksonville and Peter and Barbara Peck of Thomasville, at one performance, and Martha Slayden of Brooksville, Sam Jordan Jr. of Pensacola, Beverly Brown of Gainesville, Ga., and Richard Waff of Tallahassee, at the other.

Herman Gunter is musical director, Miss Betty Jane Grimm is staging director, and Robert Sedore will conduct the orchestra. The opera will also be given in Waycross, Ga., and Albany, Ga.

Fast walking Gene Sarazen makes his way along the first fairway with part of the gallery trailing behind at the start of his challenge match with Archie Compston. Sarazen defeated Compston two-up in an 18-hole match that took just two hours and fifteen minutes. It was the first meeting of the two veteran links stars since Compston, now pro at Mid-Ocean, handed Sarazen his only Ryder Cup defeat at Moortown, England, in 1929.

Oldtimers Give Fans Run for Their Money

HAMILTON, BERMUDA — It's no secret that the success of professional tournament golf has been built upon the idea of giving the fan a run for his money.

The only danger is, of course, to take this idea too literally. And that is just what happened during a recent exhibition match between Gene Sarazen and Archie Compston at Bermuda's Mid-Ocean Club during mid-February.

The 63-year old Compston and Sarazen, 10 years his junior, made it around the 18-hole, 6,500-yard layout in the breath-taking time of two hours and fifteen minutes, Sarazen defeated the Mid-Ocean pro two-up in the exhibition that was billed as a sequel to a memorable Ryder Cup match between the two at Moortown, Eng., in 1929.

Now 27 years is a long time between golf matches. And this alone gave a nostalgic twist to the Bermuda meeting that drew 500 spectators, the biggest golf gallery in the island's history. In addition, the weather was perfect and so was the play.

But the Sarazen-Compston walkathon wound up as an exhausting experience for just about everyone except the two veteran players, who naturally set the pace. After all, most of the fans in the gallery were American tourists who in recent years have gotten used to the slow, methodical four-hour rounds in big-time tournaments back home. They simply were not in condition for this one.

A veteran photographer, who had covered the big ones in the States including the U.S. Open, panted out the information that the Compston-Sarazen match was his toughest assignment ever. A local radio announcer, trying to describe the closing holes, nearly fell into a trap trying to keep up with the fast-walking veterans. He finally gave up, telling his listeners in a broken voice that there was no chance of his completely regaining his breath until the end of the match.

But the two old-time international links stars seemed to thrive on the speed of play. Both men frequently reached back into their brilliant past for shots that had made them famous. Compston, always a fine putter, holed a couple of 40-footers. And Sarazen, the inventor of the sand iron, made a number of spectacular trap shots. The Germantown, N. Y., professional carded a three-over-par 74 while his British counterpart had a 76.

This match actually had its beginning with a challenge from Sarazen to Compston published in Golf World January 20. The New Yorker, who has enriched the Francis Ouimet Caddie Scholarship Fund by about $10,000 through exhibitions in the past year, suggested that he play the Britisher at the latter's own Mid-Ocean Club. The former U.S. Open, British Open and P.G.A. champ figured he could further aid the Ouimet fund and at the same time square an old score with Compston.

The Mid-Ocean professional was the only one ever to defeat Sarazen in Ryder Cup competition. Compston whipped him 6 and 4 at Moortown, England, in 1929. And while Sarazen went on to win all the top prizes in golf, he never forgot that defeat by Compston.

Sarazen evened a 27-year-old score, defeating the Mid-Ocean pro two-up. Compston was the only one ever to beat the Germantown, N. Y., pro in Ryder Cup play, turning the trick in 1929 at Moortown, England, 6 and 4.*

Vail Zuill, founder and first president of the League; His Excellency, the Governor of Bermuda, Sir John Woodall; Mrs. Rendell Arton, president of the League; Mr. Zuill, and Lady Woodall. Decorations were in pink, silver, and white. The flowers on the Governor's table were pink carnations and white candytuft.

The Bermuda challenge match was full of fine golf shots. The American nearly holed out for a birdie three on the 433-yard fifth hole with an 80-foot bunker shot. And Compston grabbed a one-up lead on the eighth, a 340-yard dogleg right, by running in a 40-footer for a birdie three.

The speedy veterans reached the turn in one hour and three minutes with the Britisher still holding his one-up advantage. Compston went out in 37, two over par and Sarazen was a stroke higher.

The American just missed an eagle three on the eleventh when he hit his 4-iron second 20-feet from the pin and then rimmed the cup with his putt, enough for a win and the match was halved.

Compston's regulation four put him out in front again on the fourteenth. On the 506-yard fifteenth, Sarazen got home in two and again his bid for an eagle rimmed the cup and stayed out. The Britisher held his one-up advantage by stroking in a 40-footer to halve the hole in birdie fours.

On the 381-yard 16th, Compston's game suddenly fell apart. Sarazen squared the match with a par four. And he took the lead for the first time in the match with a par three on the 202-yard seventeenth.

Compston, dormie one going down the home hole, played boldly in a desperate bid to keep the match alive. But his second shot on the 423-yarder struck a high bank guarding the left side of the green and dropped into a gully below. He wound up with a bogie five while Sarazen, on the green in two, played it safe for a regulation four and the victory he had waited 27 years to post.

It was a great match . . . one that Bermuda will long remember. And the 500 spectators are sure to remember it long after they've forgotten the aches and pains they incurred trying to stay up with the speedy old-timers. Yes, it was well worth it.

NHE SOFT WINDS OF MARCH brought the Winter season here to its height and Neapolitans lionized these events:

The annual Flower Show and Garden Tour proved more popular than ever. In addition to a gorgeous display of flowers and floral arrangements, many of the magnificent homes were open for inspection, through the courtesy and cooperation of their owners. The homes ranged from French Provincial architecture and interior to a modern home designed for casual living in fabulous Port Royal. These houses were open for the tour: the Henry B. Watkins Sr., the Julius Fleischmans, the Frank Armstrongs, the Roy Smiths, the Arthur T. McIntoshes, the Charles Wrights, and the Clift Cornwalls.

An outdoor Art Exhibition on the spacious green lawns of The Naples Hotel drew many lovers of the fine arts. Oils, water colors, pastels, and charcoal sketches comprised the group. The paintings were viewed by professionals and amateurs and high praise was exuded by all. Many familiar Naples scenes were on canvas including the picturesque fishing boats at Crayton Cove, and the exquisite Gulf Coast seascapes lined with stately palm trees. Noted Naples artists Les Macklem and Hubert Hendry gave exhibitions of their water color technique.

Famed Emile Gruppe exhibited his oil painting technique at the McNichols Art Gallery, the season's highlight for the numerous art lovers in Naples.

The Paganini Quartet played here in the second of the Naples Community Concert series. The Quartet takes its famous name from the instruments it uses. They were all made by Stradivarius and were formerly owned by the great virtuoso, Paganini. The instruments are celebrated among connoisseurs for their peerless tones.

Outboard Motor king and Naples colonist, Stephen F. Briggs manages also to be one of the top wild life photographers in the world. Naples is talking about his newest color film "Tamiami Trail." Previewed in Miami, the film tells the story of two teenage boys who set out with a small trailer-borne outboard boat to explore the wilderness area accessible from the Tamiami Trail. Within a short distance of the modern highway, the boys find a land as primitive as it was before the days of white men. Seminoles in colorful regalia pole ancient dugout canoes through the lush green swampland of grotesque beauty. Panther, bear and deer roam wild. Sub-tropical wild-fowl, surly alligators and friendly raccoons, venomous snakes and playful otters vie for attention along the pathways.

Haynes, 15, of Naples. Both are Eagle Scouts and outdoorsmen. Their Seminole companion in the venture is Frankie Billie, son of a tribal medicine man. None had professional acting experience.

In filming the picture, Briggs continued a hobby which has taken him to many parts of the world in search of intimate and unusual outdoor pictures. He has filmed several previous complete features and much of his wildlife footage has been used by scientific organizations such as the National Audubon Society as well as being incorporated in Disney productions.

John A. McGee of Sarasota is producer of the film and wrote the original musical score. Charles Ebbets, Miami photographer, was technical assistant.

The film's premiere was at Miami, in connection with the International Boat Show there, and will be available to clubs and other organizations through Johnson Motors of Waukegan, Illinois.

MIAMI'S BALMY MARCH ZEPHYRS have blown in a gale of elegant parties with now and then a barbecue or informal Calypso shindig for a change of pace. Another social highlight was Nell Montgomery's wedding at her beautiful estate, the Palmetum, on Old Cutler Road when she became the bride of Alvin Jennings of New York.

The wedding took place in the patio at 1 p.m. Hundreds of exquisite blooming orchids, raised in Nell's greenhouse, filled the patio, and tables for the wedding breakfast were set on the rolling lawn in the garden.

Hundreds of telegrams poured into the house from well wishers but the one that Nell and "Al" will treasure for all time read: "The President joins me in congratulations and warm wishes for many years of happiness, Mamie Doud Eisenhower."

Nell, one of Miami's best dressed, wore a simple and smart dress made from a sari she brought back from India. The filmy material was pale beige with gold dots, the tiny bolero embroidered elaborately in gold. She carried a small bouquet of wonderful green orchids and wore beige accessories.

Wedding guests were members of the families and members of the board of Fairchild Tropical Garden, which Nell's late husband, Col. Robert H. Montgomery, gave to Miami.

Great inventor Alexander Graham Bell's two daughters, Mrs. David Fairchild, for whose late husband the Garden was named, and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, whose husband is immediate past president of the National Geographic Society, were among guests.

The Henry duPonts came over from their Winter home in Naples for the wedding; the Simpson Deans (she is the former Dolly duPont) came down from Golden Beach; John Clark, former president of Hialeah Race Course, Mrs. Clark and the John Galbreaths motored over from their La Gorce Island homes. Mrs. Galbreath is the former Mrs. Russell Firestone.

Nell's only attendant was Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes of Washington. Her pretty god daughter, Sarah Hambley, kept the bride's

The Jennings have bought a huge Tudor house with extensive grounds in Llewellyn Park, West Orange, N. J., where they will live, though Nell is keeping her home here and promises to come back often.

Esther and Don Allen hosted an elaborate dinner dance for 200 at La Gorce Country Club for their houseguest, Marjorie Baker. This visitor is from the Allens' former home town, Buffalo, where she is executive secretary of the Automobile Dealers' Association.

One center of interest at the party was Charles E. Wilson, Secretary of Defense, and Mrs. Wilson. Mr. Secretary is here for a much needed rest from his labors in Washington and joined his Jessie at their Surf Club apartment.

He looked fit and relaxed in his white dinner jacket and Mrs. Wilson was wearing her favorite blue, and stuck close to his side to see that he had everything his heart desired!

Another magnet for guests at the Allens' was that great comedian, Ole Olson, who regaled the company with his stories and sallies. When Irma and Floyd Akers joined his group Ole told how he discovered that the Akers were staying at his hotel last Summer in the Philippines. So, he went to a house phone and in a falsetto and accented voice told Floyd that he had a collect cable for him . . . charge $95.00. Floyd, said Ole, spluttered a bit, but said bring it up.

When Ole reached the Akers room he pounded on the door, kicked it, screamed and yelled and burst into laughter when he saw Floyd's stormy face when he opened the door!

George Obrecht, who with a syndicate of five other men, has bought a stud farm near Ocala, said that the name of the farm has been changed from the Dickey Stud to the Ocala Stud Farm.

Bill Veeneman, chairman of the board of Churchill Downs, is chairman of the board of the farm. George says he is "social chairman" and told of plans to build a clubhouse there where the owners can entertain. They'll charter a plane and fly friends up from Miami when they "warm" the new clubhouse.

Charming and clever Sheelah Murrell (she's a lawyer) and her lawyer husband marked 25 years of wedded bliss with a delightful cocktail buffet at their home on Brickell Avenue.

Their house is a chateau in the grand manner and beautiful at any time, but filled with flowers and soft lights in the garden it was an "out-of-this-world" place on the night of the party.

Sheelah wore an exquisite blue sequined lace and her blonde hair was piled high on her head. Greeting guests with the Murrells were John's son, Jack, and wife, Bunny; Sheelah's mother, Mrs. John Stockton Ernest; General and Mrs. Sumter L. Lowry; Senor and Senora Ricardo Viurrun and Senor Rafael Andino, these last three guests from Cuba.

Mrs. William Kappel, Pittsburgh and Miami Beach; Clarence Hand, Montclair, N. J., and Miami Beach; Mrs. Hand; Mr. and Mrs. William Jay Thomas, hosts at a dinner and theatre party; Mrs. Jules Reinholdt and Mr. Reinholdt, St. Louis, Mo.

Senor Viurrun's father tied the knot in Havana when Sheelah and John were married there. Senora Viurrun is a tall, dark Latin beauty and was wearing a chic black lace.

Mrs. Spratt Mangus with lovely white Vanda orchids in her silver hair and a shimmering blue dress and John's attractive sister, Mrs. Walter Godbold, assisted. Nina Mangus presided over a room filled with enough gifts of silver to start a jewelry store!

Epitome of glamour was the dinner party Baron and Baroness Walter Langer von Langendorff gave at the Surf Club. "Diane" and "Peter" are the creators of Evyan perfumes — White Shoulders, Golden Shadows, Mos Precious — at their fabulous New York factory. Their Connecticut estate is named Golden Shadows.

The Baroness is tiny and has flaming red hair and alabaster skin. She wears the most enormous and fabulous jewels seen in these environs in many a day. For instance at their dinner party, Bill Kappel, a diamond merchant from Pittsburgh, said, "Have you ever seen half a million dollars walking?" The Baroness was wearing her diamonds with sea green lace.

Cocktail hour was in the fountain room with a long table on which was a carved ic swan filled with caviar de Beluga; there was pate de foie gras Perigourdine, too, and dinner was a gourmet's delight. Pink menu inscribed with gold listed the French dishes and the von Langendorff crest and name were on the cover.

Waiters and waitresses wore short white gloves; at each lady's place was a gift of perfume, at each man's a leather case with silver comb and nail file. Two orchestra played for continuous dancing and filmy lace covered vari-colored tablecloths in the main ballroom.

The Baroness enjoys surrounding herself with young people and among this group were Steve Quay and his blonde wife, Dor Famous photographer of the Royal Family and artist, Cecil Beaton of London, came with Gen. Robert Wood Johnson, mogul of the pharmaceutical firm of Johnson and Johnson, and Mrs. Wood. Mr. Beaton was here to draw a portrait of Evelyn Johnson. They are long time friends and the Johnsons occupy his home when they are in England.

Cecil did one portrait drawing of Evelyn but it burned when their house burned. "It's a little hard to go over the same paths," weighed this tall and distinguished white-haired man.

Count Jose Dorelis, monocle glistening in his eye, was squiring Madelon Reid.

Baron Hans Weckerbarth was whirling the "Duchess" Harriet-the-young-in-heart young about the dance floor; popular bachelor Frank Manguson and the Gene Moris, father and son the senior Mr. Mori is president of Hialeah Race Course) were in the company.

Every year friends of Billie and Julio Sanchez (he is a Cuban sugar baron) look forward to the wonderful dinner party they give when game birds brought down by Julio's expert gun, feature the menu.

This year was no exception and guests were not disappointed. Seven birds are prepared for each guest; there is special barbecue sauce made by the Sanchez' Cuban cooks from a secret recipe, plus all the trimmin's which include hot mince meat tarts.

An enormous tent sheltered tables in the waterfront garden of the Sanchez home on Sunset Island II. Strolling musicians serenaded and cocktail bars were set up in the garden.

Julio likes to mingle with his guests and won't stand with Billie (she was chosen the most gracious hostess by a Miami poll), to greet their guests. So Billie had with her Nina (Mrs. Spratt) Mangus.

Marianne Reynolds, titian haired beauty and former wife of Dick Reynolds, tobacco millionaire, arrived with her "steady," Woolie Donahue; John Astor escorted beautiful blonde Toney Terry Hatfield . . . is this "A Many Splendored Thing"? . . . Sadie and Pat Cummings were dining and dancing.

Bill MacDonald, trailer king, told of the "exclusive" duck shooting club he and "11 millionaires" have. "It's so exclusive," said Bill, "that even the ducks stay away." He added that they wouldn't let host Julio become a member because he's such an expert shot that the other members of the club would never have a chance at a bird if one came by!

The MacDonalds had cruised down to the Sanchez party on their yacht "Snoozie" from their Bal Harbour home. Seems they go everywhere they can on their boat to avoid the traffic problem . . . and it IS a problem.

Comedian Joe E. Lewis came to the party after his last show and entertained with his fund of stories; Ilka Chase flew over from Cuba to dine and dance.

Saw attractive Barbara Reese, who has taken a house in Coral Gables for the season. She and Otho were divorced last Fall in New York but it's a friendly sort of thing.

Never saw the like of it before . . . Virginia and Jim Gerity's dinner dance guests at the Surf Club moved as one body across the hall into the ocean front lounge to watch and listen to President Eisenhower on TV when he announced his candidacy.

Jim is a TV and manufacturing tycoon from Adrian, Mich., and he and Virginia gave one of the most beautiful dinner dances of the season for 100 guests.

Gifts of jeweled compacts and matching lipstick cases were at each lady's place; Snooky Lanson of the "Hit Parade" came to croon sweet ballads; there was an acrobatic dancer and a comedian to amuse the gathering.

From Scarsdale, N. Y., were Janet and Oliver Treyz. He is the youthful president of TVB, Television Bureau of Advertising, Inc.

More honor guests were tall (6 feet six) James E. McCarthy, Dean Emeritus of the School of Commerce of Notre Dame University, and his petite blonde wife. They are here for a visit of several weeks at the Bal Harbour Hotel.

When the company came back into the dining room after the President's broadcast, Jim proposed a toast to "Ike," champagne glasses were raised on high and the orchestra struck up the rousing strains of the "Star Spangled Banner." An inspiring and heart-warming show of affection for our President.

Dashing Joe Timility then went to the mike and proposed a toast to the Geritys and again glasses were raised. Joe and "Pug" (Mrs. Edward S.) Moore of Circle M Farms were a fashion note, he in his handsome red dinner coat, she is a floating pink chiffon.

With Mrs. Moore were her "boat guests" aboard the "Big Pebble," June and Harry Hunt of Cypress Point Golf Club, Calif. Mr. Hunt is president of the Club.

Beach Colony Club is having a "Pastel Formal" at Riviera Country Club; the Neil Millers are having a cocktail buffet at their home on Sunset II; those glamorous sisters, Barbara Thompson and Toney Herry Hatfield are having a cocktail dance at La Gorce Country Club; Mrs. William Whitman, long time resident of Miami, is having a cocktail buffet at her waterfront home in Bal Harbour; Irisher Sue Fitzgerald is having her annual St. Patrick's Day cocktail party at her Surfside home; the Loren Berrys of Dayton and the Tom Woods of Cincinnati are joining forces for a "Spring" cocktail dinner dance at the Surf Club and the Mercy Hospital benefit dinner dance at the Surf is coming up on Easter Monday. ## Where the Golfer Is In His Glory

By Patricia Ventura

WITH THE ANNOUNCEMENT that The Greenbrier's 1956 Spring Festival will take place May 10 through 13, came the news that there's a surprise in store for the golfers entering the ninth annual Greenbrier Open and Pro-Amateur invitational event.

This Winter The Greenbrier's two championship eighteen-hole courses have been revamped. The changes on the tees and traps of the Old White Course and the Greenbrier Course will not affect the game of the average golfer, but the "long drivers" had better beware. These powerhouses had best be out sharpening their eyes for they will need greater accuracy in placing their shots lest they find themselves in the sand.

An example of what's awaiting the participants in the coming Spring Festival tournaments may be found on the Number Two Hole of the Old White Course. Here a new tee has been built to lengthen the hole 30 yards. A new trap has been placed on the right side of the fairway 220 yards from the new tee so that the line of play will be directly over the new trap.

Changes such as these will present a new challenge to the pros and top amateurs of the country who come to The Greenbrier each year for the resort's Spring Festival.

The most spectacular party of the year on The Greenbrier's social calendar, the Spring Festival was inaugurated in 1948 with the grand re-opening of the hotel which had been completely re-decorated after its wartime service as Ashford General Hospital. The fete was so successful that it became an annual weekend gala scheduled during the height of The Greenbrier's springtime loveliness — the month of May.

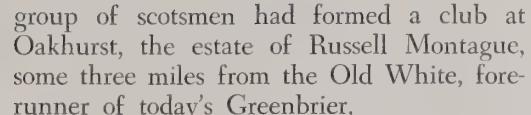

All-time favorite at The Greenbrier is Sam Snead, the resort's famous Pro. Should you land in one of the new traps on the Old White Course, this is all you have to do.

Since golf and The Greenbrier go hand in hand, it was only natural that the Spring Festival be built around the two invitational tournaments that have attracted the nation's best pros and amateurs for the past eight years. The list of participants reads like a Who's Who in golfdom. Among the winners of previous Greenbrier Open tournaments are Cary Middlecoff, Ben Hogan, Herman Scharlau, Dutch Harrison and Sam Snead, The Greenbrier's own slammin' pro who took the tournament three times in a row in 1951, '52 and '53.

Those taking honors on past pro-amateur events include John (Shipwreck) Kelly, Winston Guest, Paul Shields, William C. Ford, Redmond Stewart, Carling Dinkler and Ray A. Graham, names well known in both industry and the world of sports.

The story of golf and The Greenbrier brings forth some interesting facts. As far back as 1884 the game has been played at White Sulphur Springs. In those days a

In 1914 the Old White Course was laid out by Charles B. MacDonald, one of the finest golf architects of all times. This eighteen-hole course has been the scene of many an important match. One of the most famous was that of 1922 when Mrs. Glenna Collette Vare won her first national title.

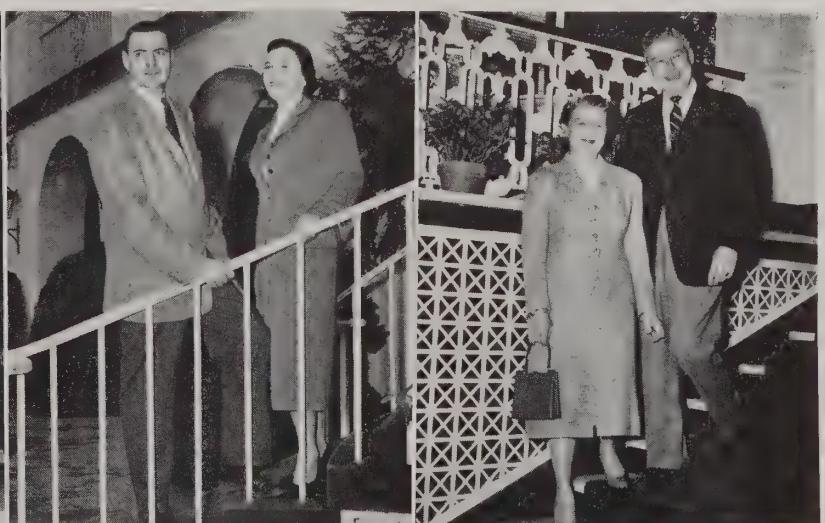

Remodeled in 1925 by George O'Neill of Cleveland, the course has tested the games of such famous golfers as Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Johnny Goodman, Lawson Little, Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews and Helen Hicks.

The men's record, 60, was made on the Old White Course in 1950 by Sam Snead, who is now celebrating his twentieth year as host professional at The Greenbrier. Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews holds the women's record with a 72.

The Greenbrier Course was added to the layout in 1926. It, too, was designed by MacDonald & Raynor. The 61 Sam Snead shot in 1938 still holds the course record for men, while Mrs. Glenna Collette Vare holds the women's record with a 72.

Gigi Aramesco, a Miami artist, wore a 300-year-old dress to the opening of the Gauguin exhibition at The Joe and Emily Lowe Art Gallery. The dress once belonged to Queen Marie of Roumania.

MASSES OF ORCHIDS and tropical plants surrounding two huge bamboo trellises decorated The Joe and Emily Lowe Art Gallery, University of Miami, when the Gauguin exhibition opened in Miami this month.

The highspot of the artistic season in South Florida, the exhibition originated in Palm Beach at the Society of the Four Arts.

The Gauguin exhibition is the last one at the UM for interim director Robert Tyler Davis. Mr. Davis will resume his directorship of Vizcaya, Dade County Art Museum, on a full-time basis after C. Clay Aldridge takes over as head of The Joe and Emily Lowe Art Gallery this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis both said they would miss the Gallery, but promised to continue to be faithful first-nighters.

Among the distinguished guests at the opening were Mrs. Forbes Hawkes, a Gallery Patron, and her two houseguests, Mrs. Magnile Barney and Mrs. Charles W. Pierson. Mrs. Barney is the sister of architect Frank Lloyd Wright and an artist herself. Mrs. Hawkes had on a handsome pair of embroidered slippers—a product of Mrs. Barney's nimble fingers. Mrs. Pierson makes her home in New York City.

UM President Dr. Jay F. W. Pearson and Mrs. Pearson viewed the Gaughin paintings with Miss Mary B. Merritt. Miss Merritt was the University's first Dean of Women and held that post for nearly thirty years. Her recent retirement had by no means diminished her active and enthusiastic interest in the University.

Gigi Aramesco wore a magnificent white dress with wide bands of black embroidery decking sleeves and skirt. Some 300 years old, the dress once belonged to Queen Marie of Roumania. Miss Aramesco, who was born in Roumania, is a well-known local artist.

The distinguished John Hay Whitney-William Fulbright scholar, Dr. Cesare Giulio Cecioni, chatted with UM English Department head Dr. W. Scott Mason. Dr. Cecioni is in the United States lecturing at various American colleges and universities, including UM. He is assistant to the head of the English Department at the University of Florence in Italy.

Mrs. George Pawley, chairman of Miami's Opera Guild, attended the gala preview with her daughters, Marcia and Anita. The Misses Pawley were among the Beaux Arts hostesses.

Carrying out the tropical theme were magnificent fruit centerpieces on the serving tables. Pineapple shells were laden with a luscious assortment of fresh fruits, including pineapple cubes, strawberries, papaya cubes and grapes. Tiny sandwiches were served with the special Barbados cherry punch.

Serving were Beaux Arts hostesses: Mrs. John M. Dyer, Mrs. Edward G. Grafton, Mrs. David S. Batcheller, Mrs. James L. Cousins, Mrs. William D. Long, Mrs. Joseph S. Stewart Jr., Mrs. Robert A. McNaughton, Mrs. George H. Sweet, Mrs. Ernest Winton (she is president of Miami's Junior League), Mrs. William F. Whitman, Mrs. Rod Overholt and the Pawley sisters.

Drama Professor Dr. Charles W. Philhour and his wife were chatting with other UMers about one of their favorite subjects—the Salon Drama Quartet. The Quartet, of which they are members, has given several highly successful readings of George Bernard Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell" in the Miami area. Other members of the Quartet are E. F. Menerth Jr., also of the UM Drama Department, and Harold Tannen. Under the auspices of the Drama Guild, the Salon Drama Quartet will present a reading of "Don Juan in Hell" at UM's Ring Theatre on April 15. The proceeds are marked for a scholarship fund for students wishing to study theatre at the UM Drama Department's summer extension in Burnsville, N. C. — the Parkway Playhouse.

Other UM first nighters included: Mrs. Julian D. Corrington, Dr. and Mrs. Sydney W. Head, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ross, Dr. and Mrs. J. Riis Owre, Eugene Cohen, Dr. James M. Godard, Mrs. Thomas R. Reese, Clayton Charles, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Massin, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Borek, Mrs. John Klinkenberg, Dr. and Mrs. Russell Austin Rasco, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Provin, Dr. and Mrs. William P. Dismukes.

Mr. and Mrs. Travers Ewell brought their charming houseguest, Mrs. Flagler Harris, to the Gauguin preview. Mrs. Harris is the granddaughter of the late Henry Flagler. She makes her home in Philadelphia, but spends part of each season with her sister and brother-in-law, Major and Mrs. Joseph G. DeFina, at their home, "Vita Serena," in Palm Beach.

Anne Allen attended opening night with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Marcus. Mrs. Allen, who is the widow of Hervey Allen, author of "Anthony Adverse," is studying for a master's degree in education at UM.

Mrs. Flagler Harris (left), granddaughter of the late Henry Flagler, with her hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Travers Ewell of South Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Robert Rowley, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Todd of New York and Coral Gables, Mr. and Mrs. William Oberman, Mrs. Maud Preston Doughty, Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Pancoast, Miss Fran Williams, Mrs. Alex Youngerman, Mr. and Mrs. George Farkas and Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Kitchens were among other notables at the preview.

Julian D. Langner, who is the brother of the Theatre Guild's Lawrence Langner, accompanied Miss Mildred Crow, UM School of Medicine librarian, to the preview. Mr. Langner's brother is scheduled for a Miami visit soon. He will be conferring with George Engle, Coconut Grove Playhouse owner, relative to year-round operation of the Playhouse.

Interior decorator James Merrick Smith and his associate, James M. Wills, brought Chicago designer Jack Denst to the Gauguin preview. Mr. Denst, a partner in the firm of Denst and Soderlund, designed many of the wallpapers used in the "Living Today — The Miami Way" exhibition at The Joe and Emily Lowe Art Gallery in February. He will be in Florida for a month visiting his parents, who live in Ft. Lauderdale.

Miami artist Robert Draper, another first nigher, lent The Joe and Emily Lowe Art Gallery a Tahitian idol carved in wood by natives. It is on view with the Gauguin paintings.

Ponte Vedra

By Madolyn Borum

WHAT FUN IT IS to watch a camera enthusiast on his arrival at Ponte Vedra! Immediately, his experienced eyes see so many possibilities for some wonderful color shots. Naturally, it isn't long before the click of the shutter is heard as he wanders about the grounds of The Inn. With banks of azaleas, camellias of all varieties, bright hibiscus and gardens filled with Spring blossoms, his pictures certainly won't lack color. And, too, there's always the sandy beach with the blue Atlantic as a background and snowy white Seagulls always ready to serve as subjects.

When our photographer desires action shots, he can wander out on the 18-hole golf course to find numbers of golfers ready to demonstrate their best swings, down to the tennis courts for white-clad players with racquets in hand, over to the Surf Club pool for a shot of a well executed dive, and always there's a fisherman on the dock. Perhaps the 'big one' isn't being reeled in right at the moment, but the wait will be short.

This was certainly true when sub-deb Melissa Marchand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen T. Marchand of Sea Girt, N. J., went fishing a few days ago. She had hardly wet her hook when there was a mighty tug on the line resulting in the landing of a blackfish weighing nine pounds. We must admit that she had to have help on getting it out of the Lagoon because, after all, she is only eleven.

That's proof that fishing at Ponte Vedra can be exciting but there are always enjoyable and exciting times for vacationers as well as residents. Members of the Ponte Vedra Women's Golf Association were an enthusiastic group during the recent tournament. Holding the championship title now is Miss Dorothea Knight. Mrs. Howard Bissell was medalist in the tournament while others in the final flights were Mrs. Dunton Howe, Mrs. Allen Laing, Mrs. Oliver Whipple, Mrs. William LaPorte and Mrs. E. E. Mance.

Incidentally, newly elected officers of the association are Mrs. James Stilwell, president; Mrs. Ding Butler, vice-president; Mrs. Paul Betzold, secretary; and Mrs. Ben Park, treasurer. These ladies and other Club members are seen frequently on the links these days.

Seen also are many vacationers enjoying the trim fairways and perfect greens. Among these are Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Thompson of Dallas; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jeffery of Scarsdale; Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Robineau of Denver; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Anholt of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Foley of Pictured at Ponte Vedra: Mrs. R. B. Wallace of Camden, Maine, and Ponte Vedra, enjoys the putting contest; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Walker of Roselle, N. J. Vancouver, B. C. (back for the second time this Spring); and Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Adams and Mr. and Mrs. Roland Wachter of Omaha.

Popular with both new and returning guests are the Monday evening cocktail parties given in their honor. These parties are held in the Cactus Room or the Gulf Club and all agree that this is a pleasant way to become acquainted with others also down for a holiday. Seen chatting recently at one of these affairs were Mr. and Mrs. William P. Richardson of Dover, Delaware; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Harris and Mrs. L. M. Dietrich of Annandale, Virginia; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Connolly and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Cornell of Bethesda; and New Yorkers, Mr. and Mrs. W. Travis Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wheaton and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Vinnecombe.

And, something new has been added at Ponte Vedra! Of particular interest to residents and Club members was the announcement that the popular Surf Club is now serving dinner Wednesday through Sunday evenings. With such wonderful food and service, this is really good news to all.

But, the announcement of the appointment of Luther N. Grimes as general manager of Ponte Vedra Club is the most important piece of news that has originated here. Formerly manager of The Country Club of Brookline, Mass., Mr. Grimes has long been a prominent figure in hotel association work and in club managers associations. Prior to his management of The Country Club, he was connected with Glenwood J. Sherrod, one of the nation's leading hotel owners and operators. First at the Hamilton Hotel in Bermuda, then at the Parker House in Boston, and later at the Bellevue and Somerset hotels in Boston. Needless to say, everyone is delighted with the addition of Mr. Grimes to the present staff of Ponte Vedra Club.

Recent additions to vacationers in the Colony are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cooley of Albany, New York in the Wheeler Cottage; Mrs. Harriet LaRocelle of Lake Forest, Ill., in the Mangum Cottage; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. May of Frankfort, Ky., in the Sheridan Cottage; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Roberts of St. Louis in the Crump Cottage; Mrs. Bruce Norris of Libertyville, Ill., in the Towers Cottage; and Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Lishon of Chester, Pa., in the Bond Cottage. Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Geron of Harrison, New York and Dr. and Mrs. R. D. Duckworth of White Plains are vacationing in the Lagoon Apartments.

Additions to the many guest lists at The Inn are W. Alfred Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Ford, Mr. and Mrs. James Barick, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Morrison and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Macheca of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy R. Brooks of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Norton Jr., of Laurel,

At Ponte Vedra, from the left, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Taylor, honeymooners from Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Robert Denike, Mrs. Vinson Hull and Mrs. Joseph Howland of Summit, N. J.; Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Turman, Wyncote, Pa. (Mrs. Turman scored a hole-in-one on the ninth recently); Governor Preston Lane of Maryland, G. H. Flood of Hagerstown, and Mrs. Lane.

Miss.; and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Morrow of New York City.

From Norfolk, Virginia came Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Goodman; from Buffalo came Mr. and Mrs. Max Blecker and Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Glenny; Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Haselden from Columbia, S. C., and Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Owens from Albany, Ga.

Other recent arrivals have included Lieutenant and Mrs. David Ball of Bloomfield Hills, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Whisler of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cotting of Boston (back for their fourth year) and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Pasfield and Mr. and Mrs. David Maxwell of Philadelphia. And, too, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bassett of Rochester; and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Filberg, honeymooners from Comox, B. C.

These and many others are enjoying a Spring vacation at The Inn and, just for the records, they're pleased they remembered to bring the camera along!

Louis Vaudable, popular owner of Maxim's famous restaurant in Paris, and Albert Blaser, known universally as Monsieur Albert, Maitre d'Hotel of Maxim's and Mrs. Blaser, were honored at a number of parties during their stay in New York. This being Leap Year, another Leap Year Assembly was held in accordance with a custom that started thirty-two years ago. As a matter of fact, the very first dance in the series in 1924 was not held on Leap Year Night and during the war year of 1944 there was no dance at all. With those two exceptions, however, there has been an Assembly of this series on every February 29th since 1924.

The 1956 event was held in the ballroom of the Hotel Plaza and the music was furnished by the Lester Lanin Orchestra.

One feature of the series is that substantially the same group of persons have been active in it throughout most of its history. Five of the nine members of the current committee and four of the group of nine patrons served in the same capacity in 1924.

Each of the subscribers was privileged to bring three ladies as his guests, who formed a feminine stag line (or doe line). The men of the committee, assisted by the patrons, formed a receiving line. The ladies sent bouquets and flowers to their hosts.

Among the males being pursued were George Temple Bowdoin, Jarvis Cromwell, Edward C. Delafields, David Hunter McAlpin, Junior S. Morgan, Paul G. Penoyer, John Rutherford, William Jay Schieffelin Jr., A. Philippe von Hemert, Cornelius Rea Agnew Jr., Gilbert Colgate, John Erving Cooper,

THE THREE-DAY VISIT of England's Queen Mother put Paris into a sartorial dither; invitations to state dinners in her honor specified full dress and decorations. And while fashionable Parisians are well equipped with both, it was the little details that called for discussion. Boleros, jackets, scarves and stoles are all tabu when one is to be presented to the Queen. Gloves must cover the elbows, but only the right one is worn. The other hand is supposedly left bare so that the wedding ring, or absence of it, can be readily seen and the form of address more easily arrived at.

With some effort, Madame Arturo Lopez-Willshaw managed to sit in the extravagant skirt of her fabulous lace gown while she chatted with Empress Josephine (Jacqueline Delubac) dressed by Dior in the chiffons beloved by Empire beauties. The former Lopez de Huici's impersonation of La Perichole was voted the evening's most authentic make-believe.

As La Perichole, favorite of the Viceroy of Peru, Madame Arturo Lopez-Willshaw was a striking partner for Goya, otherwise Antonio Canovas del Castillo. Castillo designed both their costumes: her yellow lace gown and pink ribbon headdress and his own topaz velvet coat with matching satin vest,—and sideburns. Her cigar is, of course, historic.

In France, where the rented costume is practically unknown, one does not see at a ball many Carmens or Buffalo Bills. To be unrecognizable is to be a success.

The 400 Parisians who were asked by the Viscomtesse Marie Laure de Noailles to come to her house at midnight, dressed as anyone who was anyone in music, art, or poetry between the 15th and 19th centuries (or as people out of portraits), rushed to their couturiers, with or without ideas.

For the couturiers themselves it was easy. Christian Dior decided to be the high-spirited French writer Barbey d'Aurevilly, which calls for a good head of wavy dark hair (Dior has practically none), a drooping dark moustache, dress coat and a lace jabot. This left him time to sketch an Empire gown for Jacqueline Delubac, who wanted to go as Empress Josephine, and did, with her hair in corkscrew curls across her forehead, and a satin ribbon binding her high waistline.

Antonio Castillo, who had just finished Lanvin's Summer collection and had not yet started on the four gala gowns he is doing for Grace Kelly, designed a half dozen spectacular costumes, including one for his employer, Countess Jean de Polignac (Jeanne Lanvin). For himself, he wanted to be his countryman, Goya, in topaz velvet, familiar top hat and sideburns.

Genevieve Fath, widow of the late Jacques Fath, chose to be a Watteau Columbine because the low decolletage, with ruff and plumed hat are flattering to her full figure. Her gown was made of diamond-patterned velvet in two tones. Very handsome.

Baron Philippe Rothschild's daughter Philippine was "La' Petite Fille au Volant" in a blonde wig and white ruffled cap and low square neckline.

Castillo designed Pamela Churchill's Titania costume — long-sleeved, high-waisted velvet dripping with pearl dew-drops. There was of course a Toulouse-Lautrec and a Francois I — men love to wear those beards, it seems.

The hostess? She was "Delie," and had to say so. The gown appears in so many portraits.

More than one Paris gown crossed the ocean for Chicago's debutante Cotillion this year, a ball which becomes bigger and more lucrative, in behalf of Passavant Hospital, each year. Mrs. Laurance H. Armour, honorary chairman of this year's cotillion, had her fittings in Bianiaga's before she left Paris, and made a handsome appearance at the ball in yellow satin embroidered with gold and crystal. One of the debutantes, Virginia Lunding, wore white brocaded satin woven in France. Mrs. Howard Linn's handsome two-tone gray gown, by Charles James, was of French satin.

None of the presents arriving at the Whitehall for Mrs. E. A. Grunsfeld Sr's 80th birthday party on March 21 pleased her more than the painting of the Rue du Bac in Paris which her artist-son, Ernest and his wife Maurine, brought with them to Palm Beach. It is the street as they see it when they step out of their own door; and Ernest painted it especially for his mother's birthday. In the distance is a suggestion of the Seine and a wing of the Louvre.

Madame Herve Dugardin's delicate features transformed easily into those of the Marquise de Sevigne, and Castillo dressed her perfectly in black velvet, gold lace, and gold lame.

THE HON. CHARLES S. THOMAS, Secretary of the Navy, accompanied by his wife, recently visited the Naval facilities at Pensacola.

Their plane landed at Forrest Sherman Field on a Thursday afternoon, and they were formally welcomed by a party led by Vice Admiral A. K. Doyle, Chief of Naval Air Training. Honors were given to Secretary Thomas at the parade grounds where he reviewed the Naval Aviation Cadet Regiment.

Upon arrival, Mrs. Thomas was attractively attired in a charcoal black silk dress and was wearing a small white hat. Following the parade, Mrs. Thomas was entertained at tea at the quarters of Mrs. A. K. Doyle.

That evening Secretary and Mrs. Thomas attended a meeting at the Pensacola Auditorium sponsored by the Pensacola Navy League. Secretary Thomas addressed the group and was introduced by Congressman Sikes. After the meeting, Secretary and Mrs. Thomas were entertained at cocktails and dinner by the same group at the Pensacola Country Club.

The following afternoon Mrs. Thomas attended a luncheon at the Mustin Beach Officers' Club, with Mrs. Hawkins, wife of Captain C. Hawkins, Commanding Officer of the Naval Air Station, heading a party of fourteen officers' wives.

Friday evening, Secretary and Mrs. Thomas dined with Vice Admiral and Mrs. A. K. Doyle at the Officers' Club. Mrs. Thomas was dressed in a blue silk print dress. Following the dinner, Secretary and Mrs. Thomas were accompanied by Vice Admiral and Mrs. Doyle to an Aviation Cadet party where Secretary Thomas crowned the Aviation Cadet Queen.

Saturday was also a busy day for Mrs. Thomas. She was taken on an historical tour of Pensacola by the wives of the members of the Pensacola Chamber of Commerce. They had lunch at the Harborview Restaurant. Dinner for the Thomases that evening was at the quarters of Vice Admiral and Mrs. A. K. Doyle.

Sunday found Secretary and Mrs. Thomas attending church services at the Protestant Chapel. Following the church services on the base, Mrs. Thomas worshipped at the Christ's Episcopal Church in Pensacola.

After church services, Mrs. Thomas was the guest of Mrs. A. K. Doyle, Mrs. J. P. Monroe, wife of Captain J. P. Monroe, Chief of Naval Air Basic Training, Mrs. B. M. Streat, wife of Captain B. M. Streat, Commanding Officer of the School of Pre-Flight, and Mrs. R. B. Jacoby, wife of Captain R. B. Jacoby, Commanding Officer of Corry Field, at lunch at the beautiful Bacons by the Sea Restaurant in Fort Walton Beach.

Sunday afternoon Secretary and Mrs. Thomas departed Pensacola after a very enjoyable visit.

BENNETT AND PLEASANT

Many centuries meet in this tiny little opera house (seats for 200) which once was a plaything of the Venetian nobility and is now in the United States at the Ringling Museum in Sarasota, Florida. It was originally built in the late 18th century inside a great hall in the Castle of Caterina Cornaro, Queen of Cyprus (1452-1510), great lady of the early Italian Renaissance who was the first patron of the flawless Giorgione, as well as of Titian and of day he died was the famous "Asolando."

many other artists, including the poet Petrarch. During the 19th century many of the theater's great played here but it is especially redolent of the memory of Eleanora Duse, who is reputed to have been born in a dressingroom of the theater; who is KNOWN to have made her debut there at the age of 9; who prepared her fatal tour of America there in 1923. Browning was one of the 19th century patrons and his last volume, which came out the

ASOLO THEATER at Ringling Museum

By Marian Murray

ONE OF THE MAN-MADE GLORIES of Florida — a jewel-like theater built in Italy in the 18th century — will soon have an especially designed home of its own.

That tiny playhouse, the only 18th century theater to be seen in America, once graced a castle in an Italian town north of Venice. For four years, it has been a popular feature of the John and Mable Ringling Museum of Art in Sarasota. Within the next few months it will be installed in a building that is rising behind that museum.

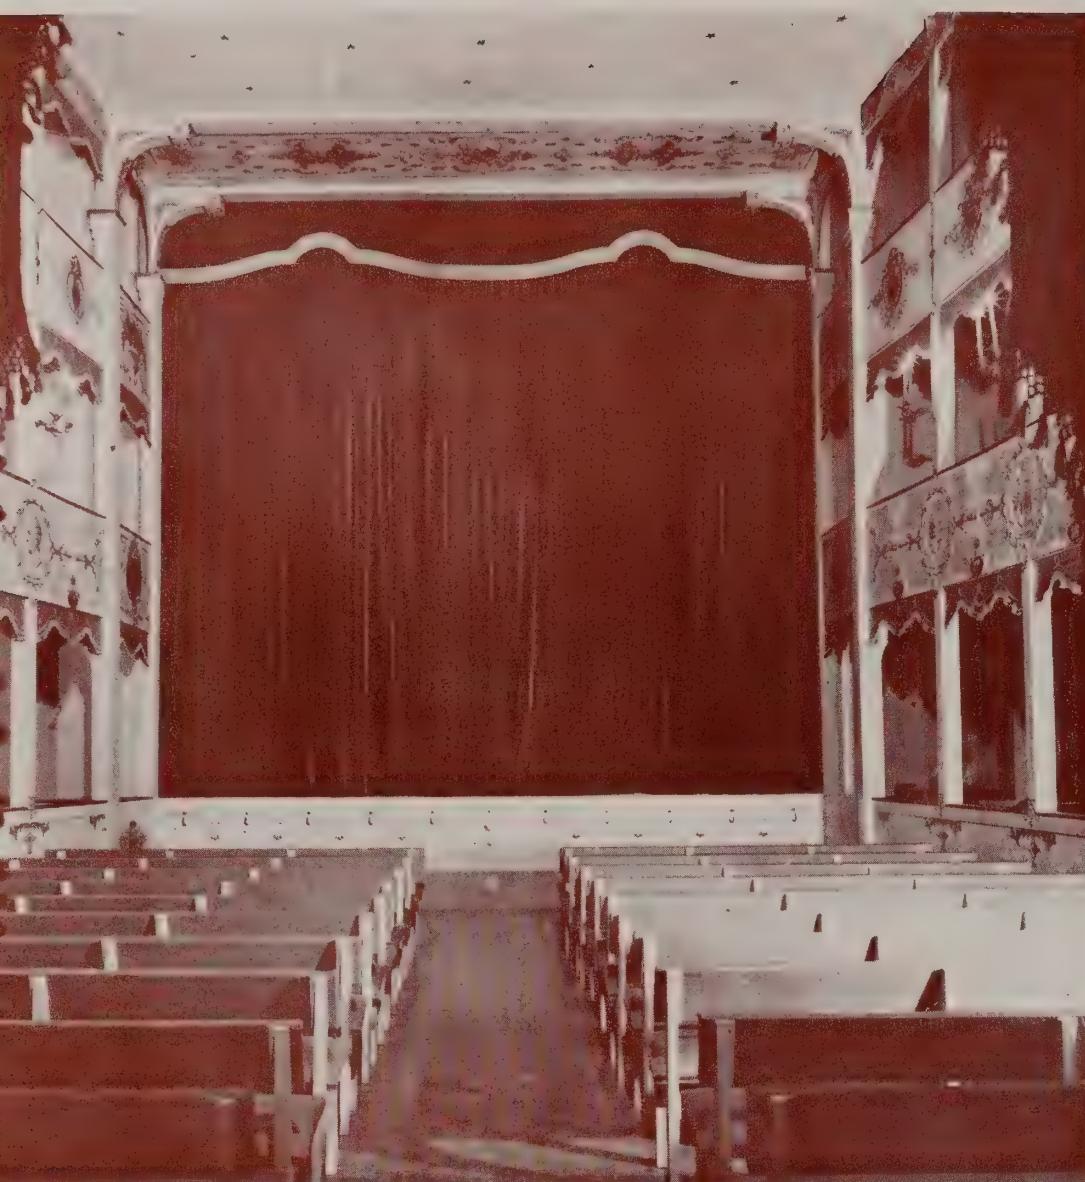

Between 1796 and 1798, a theater was built in the town of Asolo, an ancient community at the foot of the Italian Alps. After some 130 years, the charmingly elegant interior of the structure was dismantled, and the decorated portions were sold to an antiquary, who stowed them away in Venice. There they stayed until 1950, when the State of Florida purchased the Asolo Theater, on the advice of A. Everett Austin Jr., director of the Ringling Museums, and brought it to Florida.

At that time, it was believed that the museum was about to add a new wing, which would furnish a suitable permanent setting for the theater, and would also contain offices, workrooms and restoration laboratory, as well as storage space. Building difficulties at the time of the Korean War necessitated postponement of that proposed structure, and the theater was installed in temporary fashion inside the museum's auditorium, where it has been in almost constant use ever since.

Then in 1953 came the decision of the Florida State Legislature to permit erection of a building to hold the theater. Plans were prepared by Marion I. Manley, Coconut

From the back of the theater the visitor gets a view of the 21-foot proscenium framed by the stage boxes and the proscenium arch decorated with music motifs, carved, painted, and gilded.

Grove architect, working with Guy Fulton, architect to the Board of Control. Construction was begun in July, 1955.

The new building is one unit of the originally proposed addition, which eventually, it is hoped will be completed to form a continuous extension toward the west of the original building. At some future date, a connecting link, to house the much needed offices, workshops and storage rooms, will be built between the theater building and the museum. For the time being, the theater will be isolated slightly more than 100 feet from the museum John Ringling built at the end of the 1920's.

The T-shaped structure that is now rising will be approximately 74 wide and nearly 105 feet long. On the north end, a stage house 36 feet high and some 28 feet deep projects at each side to make a total of slightly more than 90 feet.

A spacious lobby opens out from the entrance at the south, and stairs will rise to the levels of the two upper tiers of boxes. In its present temporary installation, only the lowest of the three tiers can be used, giving a maximum of slightly more than 200 seats, but by making use of all three tiers around the horseshoe-shaped perimeter, the number of seats will be raised to almost 400.

Ample space for scenery will be provided in the new building; the stage itself will be deeper and broader; and even the proscenium will be widened by four feet.

Behind the Asolo Theater lies a romantic story that began nearly 400 years ago.

In 1468, Caterina Cornaro, 14-year-old daughter of the Venetian aristocracy, was married by proxy to Jacopo di Lusignan, King of Cyprus, and four years later went out to the island to take up her duties as queen. Jacopo died within the year, and a few months afterward Caterina bore him a posthumous son. When the baby was three months old, it was kidnapped by conspirators, who broke into the queen's apartments, and stabbed to death her uncle, Andrea Cornaro, and a cousin, Marco Bembo, who rushed to her aid.

Though the baby was recovered, it died as a result of the experience, and even darker clouds gathered around the young queen, with rival forces struggling to control her destiny. Venice was casting a covetous eye on Cyprus, and when the Council of Ten received word that the King of Naples wished to marry Caterina immediate measures were taken to prevent her moving into the orbit of so powerful a rival.

As one step in the 15th century game of power politics, Caterina was then dethroned, and taken to the mainland for "protection." After her official abdication on February 26, 1489, she sailed away, tearfully promising her people that she would return — a promise she was never able to fulfill. After a three months' voyage by sea, she reached Venice, where she was greeted with great pomp and ceremony. A fortnight later, the rulers in the Ducal Palace informed her that she was to be granted an allowance of 8,000 ducats, and to have as her domain the town of Asolo, 40 miles north of Venice.

Asolo is a little walled town, mentioned by Pliny in the first century A.D. as Asculum, a flourishing Roman colony. Within the walls in Roman days stood a temple to Diana, baths, and a theater. An aqueduct supplied water. Some sort of fortification stood on the outcropping of rock in the center of town, where the castle now stands, and possibly there had been an even more ancient structure, dating back to Etruscan or pre-Etruscan times.

In any event, the Roman town was destroyed by Attila in the fifth century, when he overran Italy and captured Rome, was rebuilt in approximately 1100 and partly demolished again by earthquake in 1117.

In the 13th century, Asolo became part of the domain of Ezzilino da Romano, a bloody tyrant who ruled Brescia, Padua, Mantua and the area roundabout, and who undoubtedly filled the dungeons of Asolo as he did those of other castles, before he was finally defeated in the middle of the 13th century. By that century's end, Asolo's castle was virtually in ruins, and only crumbling fortifications remained when Caterina arrived in 1489 to assume control. An area some two or three hundred yards long, by a hundred wide, was surrounded by gardens and orchards that stretched for a half mile down the slope toward the valley, beyond which lay Venice. To the north, the land rose to the mountain range that stretched from the Piave River to the Brenta, with the snow-capped Alps rising in the distance.

When Caterina arrived in Asolo, she was received by the townspeople with great enthusiasm, and settled down to a luxurious and colorful life that endured almost until her death in 1510. During that thirty years, she restored the castle, making of it a habitable palace surrounded by gardened landscaping. Three hundred years later, when the theater was built, there remained of that castle only a large hall with an attached clock tower, and a much smaller tower or guardhouse at some distance.

Caterina was a gay young woman, very fond of life, who built around herself a lively cultural center, encouraging painters, writers, musicians and other artists to such an extent that many Venetians built villas nearby, in order to participate in the gayety.

In 1508, during a struggle between the League of Cambray and Venice, the troops of Maximilian I took Asolo, and Caterina was forced to flee to the city. During the next year, she became involved in a plot stirred up by her agent on Cyprus to restore her to the throne of the island, which was discovered by the Venetian Council of Ten, who warned her to desist. On July 10, 1510, Caterina Cornaro died in Venice, and her funeral was attended by great crowds of people, despite a hurricane that raged during the ceremonies.

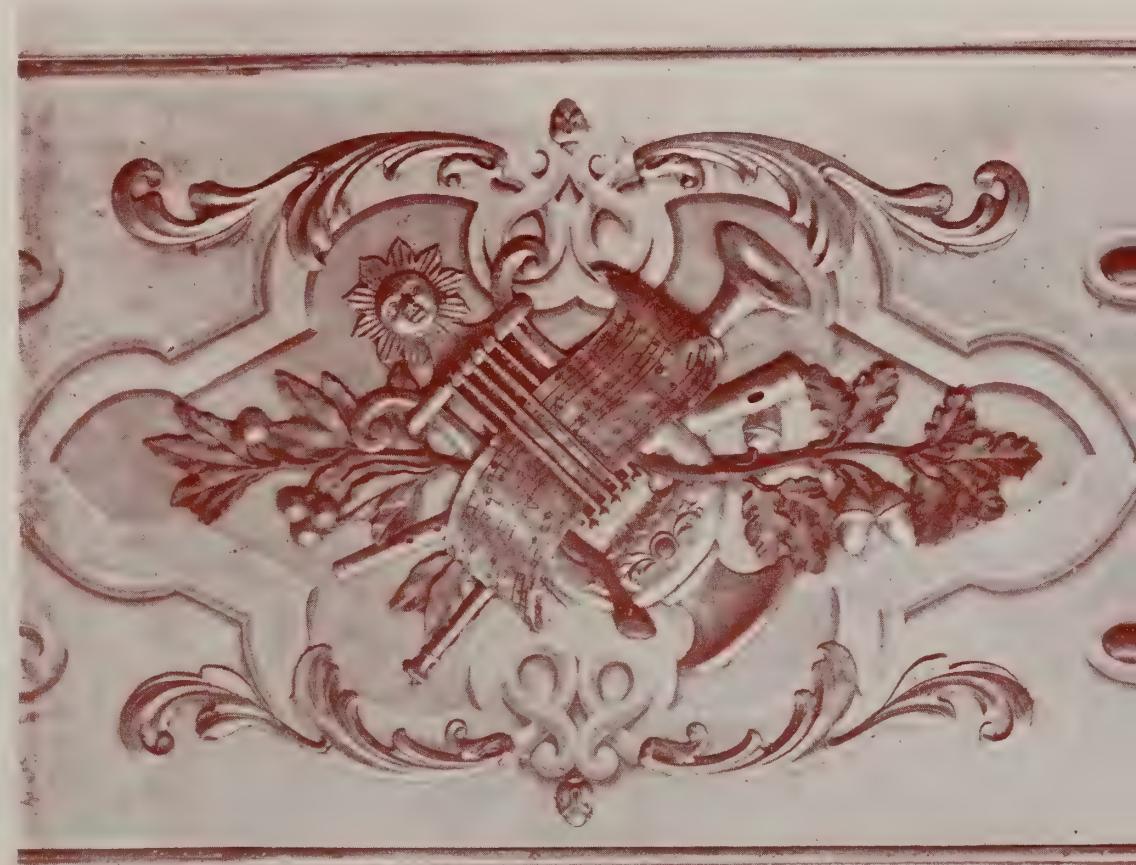

In a book called "Degli Asolani," first published in 1505, Cardinal Pietro Bembo, who at one time had been Caterina's secretary, immortalized the idyllic life at her court, and after her death the flavor of that tradition lingered on. It still pervaded the town at the end of the 18th century, when the citizens built the tiny theater in her memory.

The court's artistic atmosphere, is recalled in the decorations of that theater, as they appear in the proscenium arch, in the ceiling, and in the curving walls that serve as fronts for the three tiers of boxes. Pale gold and jewel-like colors sparkle and gleam, against a background of grey and green. Profile portraits of great Italian literary figures form a frieze. Here are motifs suggesting music, drama and dance. Today, all the original decorations except the ceiling exist in the original state. The painted ceiling was destroyed when the theater was dismantled in 1930.

Facing the stage, above the lowest tier of boxes, is a portrait of the queen herself, wearing a crown with slender points, set above a white veil, and with pearls encircling her throat. Many artists painted her, and this portrait in the memorial theater is said to have been copied after a likeness by Giovanni Bellini, now in the museum in Asolo.

Throughout the 19th century, the Asolo Theater was in constant use, and numerous famous artists appeared there. During the early years, the playhouse passed into private hands, and in 1857 into those of a Society of Box Owners, who furnished the boxes each according to his own taste. Robert Browning attended performances there when he visited Asolo in 1838, and it was from the town that he drew his background for "Pippa Passes."

DETAIL OF THE PROSCENIUM ARCH DECORATION.

A view of the theater showing the boxes. At one time the theater was owned by a Society of Box Owners, who furnished the boxes each to his own taste.

When, in 1930, the theater was removed from Caterina's palace, it was replaced by a cinema palace on the modern style, called Il Teatro Eleanora Duse, in homage to the great actress who once lived in Asolo.

Nowadays, it is peculiarly suitable that the Asolo Theater, which had been dedicated to a queen who was born of a Venetian family, should find its home in Sarasota, as a feature of the museum built by John and Mable Ringling. The Ringlings were devoted to Italy and all things Italian, and especially to the glorious city on the Adriatic.

John Ringling would surely have delighted in the gilded Rococo arabesques of the theater's decoration, and be enthusiastic about its pattern of color and movement, which is closely related to the spectacular Baroque style found in many of the paintings he hung in his museum. The great patron, who loved all aspects of theatrical entertainment, would also have approved heartily the uses to which the theater is put in Sarasota.

Before the Museum of Art was built, Mr. Ringling instructed the architect not only to incorporate into it an auditorium but to devise a stage at one end of the court, where plays and concerts might be given in the open air. As a happy by-product, incidentally, it became evident several years ago that the acoustics of the court are phenomenal. However, though certain productions have been presented there under the sky, in almost every instance concerts and plays at the Ringling Museum are given in the Asolo Theater. There too, every season many hundreds listen to lectures and watch motion pictures.

Even in its temporary installation, the Asolo Theater has become famous far and wide. When it achieves the dignity and serenity of a permanent home, designed to emphasize its unique features and to make full use of its potentialities, the beauty of the lovely little playhouse will be even more evident, and its effectiveness as a cultural center will be even more clearly demonstrated.

"The Grove," current Temporary Mansion, is the home of Governor and Mrs. LeRoy Collins. The house was built in 1824 by Mrs. Collins' great-grandfather, Richard Keith Call, who was twice Territorial Governor of Florida.

Florida's New Governor's Mansion

By Dorothy Burt Johnson

FLORIDA'S NEW GOVERNOR'S MANSION is beginning to rise slowly above the ground on which workmen toiled fifty years ago to build in Tallahassee the first state-owned executive residence.

Architect Marion Sims Wyeth has designed a building that is "built to last 300 years."

In the general style of "The Hermitage," Tennessee home of Andrew Jackson, Florida's first Territorial Governor, the new mansion will have an exterior of solid masonry construction, veneered in brick.

The design of the house has its foundation in the Greek Revival architecture of the nineteenth century.

The building will have a three-story central section, with wings of two-story height on either side. Six columns support the central portico.

The bottom floor is generally below ground level, and will be used for normal service features, an office for the Governor, a secretary's office, an aide's bedroom and bath, a board meeting room and a file room.

There will be a marble-floored entrance hall in the central section, leading to a state reception room of large proportions, and a state dining room capable of seating seventy-two diners. These rooms are in the wing on the left.

The family living quarters will be in the other wing, and will include living and dining rooms, and a guest bedroom and bath. The top floor of the central section will contain four bedrooms, each with its own bath, and a small kitchenette.

State and family kitchens and service pantries are at the back of the central section.

The recently demolished Mansion was also of the Greek Revival type. Described in

The Tallahassee Democrat for January 19, 1906, "... the proposed building presents a very handsome appearance outwardly. The building represented is of Corinthian style of architecture. The front and sides are surrounded by a broad gallery, supported by massive Corinthian columns to the height of the building, which will be of wood or concrete as the appropriation is not sufficient for a stone structure and will cost approximately $20,000."

The total contract for the new Mansion is $223,537.

today have been used as Governor's residences.

Oldest of these is "The Grove," current Temporary Mansion, and ancestral home of Mrs. LeRoy Collins, First Lady of Florida. It is located across the street from the present-day official executive mansion.

"The Grove" was started in 1824 by Richard Keith Call, great-grandfather of Mrs. Collins. Call came to Florida as an aide to General Andrew Jackson during the Seminole Indian Wars, and stayed to serve twice as appointive Territorial Governor during the 1830's and 1840's.

This fine old house, too, is patterned along the lines of "The Hermitage." The curving stairway that rises from the back of the central hallway, suspended without steel, is said to be identical to the one in Jackson's home.

brick construction. The portico wall is plastered and painted white, there is a curving fanlight above the doorway, and an identical doorway at second floor level. Four white columns support the portico.

"The Grove" has three stories. The ground floor contains kitchens and service rooms, with a very narrow winding stairway leading to the floor above. The second and third floors have a long central hall, with two large rooms on either side. The porch across the back of the house has been glass-enclosed in recent years, and a kitchen and pantries added on the dining room level.

Governor William D. Bloxham bought a town house when he was elected Governor in 1881, and moved in from his plantation home near Tallahassee. He lived in the house during his 1881-1885 term, and was still living on North Calhoun Street during his second term, 1897 to 1901. He is the only Governor ever twice elected to the office.

The house was old when Governor Bloxham bought it, having been built in the 1830's. It is of brick, washed with cement, and has small turned columns in pairs supporting the porch roof. There is delicate iron grillwork along the edge of the roof, and the front yard was once enclosed with this same iron work. The fencing has been removed recently, and additions built at the side and back. It is used now as a small hotel.

The other Governor's residence was used only briefly, during the time the first state-owned Mansion was being constructed. Governor and Mrs. Napoleon Broward lived in the house at 406 North Monroe Street, known locally as the Convent house.

This house was built in 1847 as a home, and later was used for some years as a convent of the Roman Catholic Church. It is of cement covered brick, with dormer windows, and double and triple chimneys at the ends of the house. It is now the home of Mrs. Ada Y. Brown.

will be completed in January of 1957. Initial planning of the structure was done by Governor and Mrs. Collins and members of the State Cabinet and their wives.

A Mansion Advisory committee has been appointed by the Cabinet to recommend things needed for the general upkeep of the structure in the future. This committee also will make recommendations for furnishing and decorating the house.

Frank D. Moor is chairman of the committee, and other members are Mrs. Rod Shaw, Mrs. Edwin White, Mrs. John H. Phipps, Mrs. Thomas Bailey and William Watson. Mrs. LeRoy Collins is an ex-officio member.

Mrs. Collins has said, "The house, of course, will not be perfect, but I hope it will be near-perfect. I hope that every person who has any part in its construction will do his very best, take a personal pride in the house, and not feel that it is just another building."

Now a small hotel, this house was the home of Governor William D. Bloxham during his two terms as Governor, 1881-1885 and 1897-1901.

Known as the Convent house, and present home of Mrs. Ada Y. Brown, this house was used as Temporary Mansion by Governor and Mrs. Napoleon Broward while the first state-owned Mansion was being built in 1906.

AS IN FORMER YEARS, March continues to be favored by the yachting contingent cruising to the Palm Beach Biltmore docks. Ardent anglers, too, after big game fish in the Gulf Stream have been keeping Capt. Woods busy aboard the "Michael H." and most notable of the anglers this season who departed for a day's fishing off the shores of Palm Beach were General and Mrs. Mark Clark.

General and Mrs. Clark came to Palm Beach for a quiet holiday and during their stay were entertained at a small luncheon party aboard the "Carola" at the Palm Beach Biltmore docks by Colonel and Mrs. Leon Mandel, who have been hosts to numerous top brass figures in the political, business and social worlds this season.

A prominent yachting foursome from Winnetka, Ill., who entertained extensively during their stay at the Biltmore docks aboard the yacht "Genie," were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ames and Mr. and Mrs. George Getz. The foursome enjoyed a leisurely cruise to the Keys before heading for home.

New Jersey skippers have predominated at the Biltmore docks this year and tied up in port are the "Sybarite" from Point Pleasant with owners Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Seamon on board, and the "Darling" from Atlantic Highlands with Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Chasmar at the helm. James V. Igoe of Shrewsbury River was also a March visitor aboard the well-known "I-Go II" and the aptly named tender "I Go Along."

Colorful personalities adding zest to the Biltmore scene have been such well-known theatrical personalities as Tallulah Bankhead and Bea Lillie. Both occupied luxurious suites during their stay here and were the reigning stars at the Palm Beach Playhouse.

Political figures have also been calling the Biltmore home and included the well-known New Jersey Senator and Mrs. John A. Lynch from New Brunswick, who have enjoyed a holiday here with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. William Hughes of their home town.

A Pennsylvania Senator choosing March for his holiday was Senator and Mrs. M. B. Donolow of Philadelphia. Much of their time was spent sailfishing off Palm Beach.

Interesting dinner parties have dotted the social scene and hosts at a champagne dinner in the Grande Dining Room recently were Mr. and Mrs. Graham M. Brush of Warren, Conn. Mr. Brush, who is chairman of the board of Seatrain Lines, Inc., gave the dinner in honor of the directors of Seatrain and their wives, who came to Palm Beach to hold their first Florida meeting. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Daniel E. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Smith, New Canaan, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Edgar A. S. Bright, New Orleans, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Dickinson, Palm Beach, Mr. and Mrs. George Amory, Delray Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Benson, Philadelphia, and New Jersey residents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Olsen of East Orange and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hodgson of Montclair.

The Biltmore's annual Easter Fashion Parade held on March 25 in which over fifty shops of the Palm Beaches participated, surpassed in beauty and showmanship all former Easter shows staged during the past five years. Held out on the Cabana Terrace, it attracted fully 1500 residents of the Palm Beaches. Models for the entire family, from toddlers to grandparents, were shown.

The Biltmore, which will close its doors on the most brilliant season in its history on April 15, will continue to feature a full program of social and sports events with dancing nightly in the beautiful Florida Room by the Meyer Davis orchestra under the direction of Paul Sparr, until then. Bill Boston's orchestra spotlights activities in the West India Room and Terrace and dance exhibitions thrice nightly are presented in the Florida Room by international dancers Wynners and Angeline.

LITCHFIELD PARK, ARIZONA

E. J. Thomas, president of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio, unites with his son and daughter each Winter at The Wigwam for several weeks. From the left, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, their daughter, Mrs. J. F. Mercer, their son, R. V. Thomas, daughter-in-law, Mrs. R. V. Thomas, and son-in-law, Capt. J. F. Mercer. The Mercers came from San Antonio while the R. V. Thomases are from Los Angeles.

HERE HAS BEEN neither an empty room nor an empty moment at The Wigwam in Litchfield Park, Arizona, the past two months as guests from throughout the United States and Canada have flocked to the resort seeking sun and fun in the Arizona desert.

A heavy contingent of visitors from Vancouver, B. C., have sought refuge from the cold Canadian Winter at The Wigwam. Among the guests from that city have been Mr. and Mrs. H. Rendell, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Warren, Colonel and Mrs. W. G. Swan and Colonel Swan's sister, Miss MacKenzie and the Frederick Thurstons. Another British Columbia couple was the R. W. Diamonds, returning for another season from Trail, B. C. All played quite a bit of golf on The Wigwam's 18-hole course and Mr. Rendell, former member of the British Ryder Cup team, was a consistent low-70 shooter.

Salt Lake City also provided a large number of guests, including the Lynn Thompsons, the Edgar Berings, the C. W. Nortz', the Beverly Clendenins, the Dr. F. B. Baileys, the D. D. Moffatts, the Dale Smiths and Mrs. William H. McIntyre.

John Hauschild, of Minneapolis, returned to The Wigwam for his ninth season. Other Minneapolis visitors included the Paul Dobsons, the Walter Winslows, the Wadsworth Williams, and the Charles Kings. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lawrence and two sons, Robert and Rusty, were St. Paul guests, along with the Horace Kleins, Mrs. Paul Myers and Mrs. Ruth Cook.

Seattle guests were Messrs. and Mmes. Stanley McPherson, Ben Cook, Dan McEachern and D. P. Dennehy. From Tulsa, Okla., came Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis F. Bryan.

Pennsylvania visitors included the Paul Edelmans, of Reading, the Fred Christmas, of Shillington, and the D. M. Pettys, of Bethlehem. The Pettys were joined in late February by their children and grandchildren from California.

Coming from Ohio were Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Grier and Mr. and Mrs. James Clark, from Cincinnati; the B. J. Gutherys, the C. M. Lemperlys and the H. H. Hamptons from Cleveland; and the Carl Mitcheltrees from Columbus.

From Kansas City came the C. J. Pattersons, the B. J. Davis, the B. H. Erichsons and the Vernon Griffiths. Other Kansans were the L. T. Childs, the A. D. Rayls, the Norman Krauses, and the Gilbert Rains, all from Hutchinson.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Dunne, Mr. and Mrs. Lester McCoy and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hershberger are spending the season from Wichita, Neb.

Two family groups came from Chicago, finding particular fascination in desert horseback riding. They were the A. L. Michels and the W. C. Jones. Another family, coming in from New York City, were the M. M. Denkers.

Two newlywed couples have spent recent honeymoons at The Wigwam — Mr. and Mrs. John C. Earle from Blaney Park, Newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. John Earle of Blaney Park, Michigan, spent their honeymoon at The Wigwam. Mr. Earle is co-owner of the Blaney Park resort in Michigan's northern peninsula.

It meant missing a few days of school, but second-grader Susan Denker had a big time vacationing at The Wigwam recently with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Denker. They are from downtown Manhattan.

Judge and Mrs. J. E. Singleton of Glens Falls, N. Y., are Wintering at The Wigwam. They while away many hours on the resort's putting green and, apparently, the practice pays off, as they recently won a putting tournament among Wigwam guests.

Ralph Thomas, immediate past president of the American Automobile Association, practices a few shots on The Wigwam's putting green as his wife watches. The Thomases, who live in Grosse Pointe, Michigan, vacationed for two weeks at The Wigwam. Mr. Thomas is president of Speaker, Hines & Thomas Printing Co. in Detroit.

Michigan (where he is co-owner of the Blaney Park resort) and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kern, of Chicago.

An especially busy social schedule has kept the guests occupied, supplementing their own relaxation programs of swimming, golfing, riding, tennis, croquet or just plain sun-bathing. Weekly steak fries in the desert have been well attended, with guests riding out by stage-coach and horseback. Movies, fashion shows, aquacades, magic shows, pool-side buffet luncheons, rodeos, putting tournaments, square dancing and nights of cards and bingo have all proved popular.

Certainly one of the highlights of the season was the annual Valentine's Day complimentary cocktail costume dance. Guests came garbed in virtually every type of costume imaginable. Winners of costume prizes were: best man — Robert Brebner, Akron, Ohio; best woman — Mrs. G. W. Wallerich, Oak Park, Illinois; best couple — Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moss, Big Horn, Wyoming; honorable mentions — Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harp, Akron, Ohio; and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Enright, St. Joseph, Mo.

Birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Reade Whitwell, manager of The Wigwam, was an event of great excitement on February 10. The baby is the Whitwell's first.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker of Tulsa, Oklahoma, have been coming to The Wigwam year after year to spend the Winter. Mr. Walker, prominent Tulsa oil-man, gets in a daily round of golf.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Diamond of Trail, British Columbia, recently completed a two-month stay at The Wigwam. The resort has become a favorite Wintering-place for many British Columbia prominents.

INVITATIONS for after-theatre parties honoring stars of the Palm Beach Playhouse are the most sought after party invitations in Palm Beach, this in spite of the fact that the festivities are held at 11:30 p.m. on Monday nights.

The first of these now famous parties was given by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Sanford at their home in Palm Beach. The following Monday night Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Peck entertained the visiting stars from the Playhouse, at the Everglades Club. Others who have given after-theatre parties include Nathan Cummings, Mrs. Merriweather Post, Mrs. Middleton O'Malley-Keyes, Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Trout, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gubelmann and Mr. and Mrs. Spelman Prentice.

Saint Augustine

ONLY A FEW of the old and historic houses in St. Augustine are still in private hands, which is one reason why the Prince Murat House, built in the 18th century, and occupied by Napoleon's famous nephew during the 19th, is so interesting. It has been privately restored and is the residence of Kenneth Worcester Dow, grandson of the former Chicago Board of Trade president, Asa Dow.

This charming house on St. George Street houses Mr. Dow's antiques, some of which belonged to Prince Napoleon Achille Murat; his parents, the King and Queen of Naples; and to his Princess bride, Catherine Gray Willis, a great-niece of George Washington. A number of these relics were given Mr. Dow by the Contessa Eugenia Rasponi, great-granddaughter of the Queen.

After the fashion of the period of the Second Spanish Occupation, the house is one-and-a-half stories, is built right on the street with its overhanging vine-covered balcony. Rooms open onto secluded patios; and in one is a magnolia tree planted by Prince Murat. Among the portraits is an original one of Caroline, Queen of Naples, sister of the great Emperor.

The elaborate fashion show staged at the Hotel Ponce de Leon by the Junior Service League brought out more than 700 delighted spectators. An oriental pageant, starring Miss Mary Capo and arranged by Mrs. John D. Bailey and Mrs. Lillian Lindsley, opened and closed the charity event, finally revealing W. I. Drysdale as "The Sultan of Rotagilla," whose identity had been a secret for months.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Tyler Van Campen and Mr. and Mrs. Davie Meitin were joint hosts to 150 guests at cocktails before the show, at the Van Campens' Arpieka Street home.

A week later the gardens of the Spanish Treasury were the setting for a show of casual fashions, aptly called "Casually Yours." Mrs. Anthony Thieme staged it, and Stanley Nass was narrator. On March 8 another style show was given here by Jane Fayssoux of Ponte Vedra Beach; and there will be another at the Ponce pool during the tournament of the Florida East Coast golf championship for women.

Captain and Mrs. Tucker Carrington Gibbs gave a large cocktail party in their Water Street home, "Sea Chest," honoring Mrs. Gibbs' brother, Andrew Anderson and Mrs. Anderson of La Jolla, California, and Wyoming. He is the namesake of his illustrious father, Dr. Anderson, close friend of Henry Flagler. The party also honored the Gibbs' other houseguests, Admiral and Mrs. Harry Hill of Annapolis (he is the retired head of the Naval Academy); and Admiral Robert C. Lee, vice-president of Moore-McCormick, and Mrs. Lee. Also visiting the Gibbs this Winter were Admiral and Mrs. Oscar Badger of Long Island.

The dinner and ball given by the Artists Guild of St. Augustine on Washington's Birthday at the Ponce brought out a large number of the town's social leaders. Among those who entertained large parties were Mrs. Ernest Voegtlander, Mrs. Benoni Lock-

Do You Want To Catch a Record Fish?

By Cleveland Van Dresser

THE QUESTION EMBODIED in the title of this article is comparative to asking a youngster if he is interested in ice cream, or if a duck likes to swim. The answer from most anglers would be, of course, an emphatic affirmative.

Coupled with this alacrity would be the sober reflection that chances of realizing that ambition are pretty slim — there are millions of fishermen in the world and only a tiny handful of record holders.

It is readily agreed that attaining the exalted status of a record holder in the piscatorial field is a rare accomplishment indeed, and one vouchsafed by very few sportsmen. No attempt will be made here to minimize the heavy odds against the average angler.

However, there are certain factors in the picture that can and do reduce those odds considerably. The most important factor will appeal forcibly to Floridians. If you fish within the confines and shore lines of the Sunshine State, your chances of breaking an existing world's record are considerably better than if you fish in almost any other part of the world. In addition, if you are a woman, you stand a better chance of breaking into the exclusive circle of record holders than if you are a man.

These provocative statements are made after a study of the history of game fish records kept by the highest court in the world in such matters — the International Game Fish Association — IGFA for brevity.

To substantiate these statements, a perusal of IGFA records over a period of several decades reveals the astonishing fact that more than 60 world record beaters have been caught off Florida shores. And what is possibly more interesting, most of these fish have been landed during the past five years. Only upon rare occasion has a record breaker held up for longer than that. Someone usually comes along and catches a bigger fish.

That should cheer you up appreciably. As a matter of fact, I thought of writing this story only a few months ago. Since that time, one world's record has been beaten. We'll come to that later.

Now about the women having the better of it in this record business. If you'll bear with me for a paragraph or two, you'll learn the answer.

In the first place, qualifying for a world's record is a somewhat complicated business. The IGFA, which is the sole authority in such matters, sets forth no less than 13 qualifications. You can qualify under any one of these categories — sometimes under two and even under three. Upon rare occasions, if you are a woman, your fish may even hit the jackpot under four different categories.

To explain: You are a woman and have caught the largest white marlin ever recorded, thereby breaking the existing record. First you qualify under the head, "All Tackle." Being a woman, you also qualify under "All Tackle; Women." Let us assume you used 50-pound test line in making your catch. In that case, you also qualify for "Fifty pound Test; Men and Women." Again, because you are a woman, you come under the "Fifty pound Test; Women," classification.

If you're a mere male and accomplish the feat of catching the world's largest white marlin, you hit the "All Tackle" classification, plus the class your tackle entitles you to. The distaff side gets quite a break in this business of snagging world's record fish, as you can readily see.

The IGFA also lays down certain rules of conduct which must apply during the actual catching of a fish, else it will not qualify for consideration as a record holder. Some of the rules are: (1) You must hook the fish yourself. (2) You cannot receive help in fighting the fish. (3) You cannot rest your rod on the gunwale of the boat. (4) You must conduct the entire battle with the original line — no extra line can be added. (5) The fish must be unmutilated — shark bites disqualify the fish.

There are other regulations pertaining to the measuring and weighing of the fish, plus affidavits from witnesses. These matters are usually taken care of at the dock and almost always there is someone around who knows.

Reason for the frequent changes in title holders can be ascribed to more advanced types of tackle used, plus more knowledge of the habits and characteristics of various game fishes. From now on a brief resume of current title holders will be presented. I'll tell you when and where. I won't tell you how. If I knew the answer to that one, I might be in a position to write about a record fish of my own.

In all, 66 records have been chalked up by anglers fishing in Florida waters. (One of them is a tie — another fish of the same species having been caught in the Bahamas). Forty-one men have figured in world's record catches, and 26 women have rung the bell. Considering that big game fishing is regarded as predominately a man's sport, women seem to do mighty well in this business of latching on to world's records.

In case you've figured that 66 records don't jibe with 67 persons, remember the tie. To satisfy your curiosity, on March 21, 1951, J. Marron Jr., caught a 40-pound kingfish off the waters of Hollywood. On June 29 of the following year, Joyce Cuevas also caught a 40-pound kingfish — this one at Walker Cay, Bahamas. Marron's fish was longer, but Miss Cuevas' specimen was bigger around. Both fish are records in the 12-pound test classification, which incidentally is the lightest of all lines recognized by the IGFA in salt water fishing.

Which brings me to the most recent record breaker. Up to April of 1955 the largest kingfish listed in the IGFA record book was caught near Miami Beach on August 1, 1952. Angler was B. L. Trobliger and the fish weighed 49 and 1/2 pounds. It was the largest king listed as having been caught in Florida waters and was subdued on 20-pound test line. On April 26, 1955, George Mole of Amityville, Long Island, N.Y., hauled aboard a 58-pound kingfish on 30-pound test line. That fish now stands as the current record holder in its division and is the largest kingfish ever caught in Florida. It was landed near Palm Beach.

Amberjack and permit seem to be the most prolific fish as far as furnishing records is concerned. Seven of each of these species have a total of 14 entries marked to their credit in the record books. Top of the amberjack list is a 100-pound fish caught by Mrs. F. Teed near Palm Beach on June 15, 1952. The fish is listed under the division, "All Tackle; Men and Women." It is also listed under "50-pound Test; Men and Women," which gives Mrs. Teed three titles for her giant amberjack.

There are some screwy records in the books. Under ordinary circumstances you'd think the heavier the tackle the larger the fish. It's usually that way, but not always. Take permit, for instance: On March 13, 1950, Fred Pabst Jr., landed a 36-pound permit near Craig, Florida. He was using only 12-pound test line. The IGFA record for permit caught on 80-pound test line is but 34 and 1/2 pounds — a lighter fish on much heavier tackle. The fish was caught by R. R. Channel on February 1, 1951, near Naples.

A similar situation applies to amberjack. An 81-pound amberjack holds the record in the 80-pound test division. This fish, caught by Mrs. S. White on April 18, 1951, off Palm Beach, was 19 pounds lighter than Mrs. Teed's whopper caught on 50-pound test line.

It all goes to prove you never can tell what a fish will do. It's been said many times that fishing is one sport where the novice has a better chance of scoring than in any other sport in the world. The fish doesn't know who's on the other end of the tempting morsel he seizes, and what's more, he doesn't care. He's as liable to grab the lure of a total neophyte as he is to latch on to a bait offered by an angler who's been fishing faithfully for 50 years. I've known men and women who have spent years trying to catch a sailfish, with no luck. And I've seen a rank beginner go out for the first time and get two of them. It's this element of complete chance that helps to make sports fishing the fascinating pastime it is.

However, persistence does bring rewards. The name of R. H. Martin appears six times in the record book. He caught all his record fish in one year — 1952. It must have been a busy year for Mr. Martin, to have cut a swath like that.

On December 3 (1952) he landed a 41-pound giant sea bass at Boca Grande using 12-pound test line. On September 15 he caught a 5-pound, 9-ounce Summer flounder near Panama City Beach using 12-pound test line. On November 8 he garnered another giant sea bass near Panama City Beach. This one, caught on 20-pound test line topped the one he caught a month later at Boca Grande. On April 11 he landed a cobia weighing 49 pounds, 15 ounces, again at Panama City Beach. He used 20-pound test line.

On May 19, using 30-pound test line, and once more at Panama City Beach, Martin really went to town in the sea bass department, landing a whopper that strained the scales at 197 pounds, 8 ounces. Again Martin hit the jackpot with a 127-pound, 8-ounce sea bass he caught at Marathon on November 8. This holds the record in the 130-pound test division.

I know it looks peculiar. A 197 pound fish holding a record in the 50-pound test class, and a mere 127 pounder holding the record in the 130-pound test class. But that's the way the book reads. At any rate, Mr. Martin chased around the state somewhat during 1952 to hang up six world's records.

Most people believe that marlins, both white and blue, are caught generally in the Bahamas. To some extent, this is true, but there are four marlin records chalked up by anglers who fished off Florida waters. A white marlin of 161 pounds caught near Miami Beach on March 20, 1938 by L. F. Hooper still holds the all tackle record. S. C. Way still retains the 30-pound test record in the white marlin department with a 118-pound fish caught off Miami Beach on May 13, 1949.

The third white marlin record, awarded for a 144 pounder is held by G. W. Walker. He caught that giant on February 6, 1928, off Ft. Lauderdale.

J. Logan holds the only blue marlin record for that species of fish caught in Florida waters. He nailed a 165 pounder near Palm Beach on February 11, 1950.

In all, 19 species of salt water fish are represented in the various categories by Florida record holders. If you're interested, here's the list, with numbers of records in parentheses:

Amberjack (7); permit (7); snook, (6); sailfish, (5); tarpon, (5); giant sea bass, (5); wahoo, (4); white marlin, (3); kingfish, (3); dolphin, (2); barracuda, (2); sea trout, (3); cobia, (2); blue marlin, (1); swordfish, (1); Allison tuna, (2); Summer founder, (1); Mako shark, (1); black drum, (1); bonefish, (1) and bonito, (1).

(I know that doesn't add up to 66 records, but on several occasions I've omitted fish that were listed twice in the same classification — also the tie mentioned earlier.)

Perhaps you're wondering about fresh water fish. I'm sorry to report that despite the world wide reputation of Florida's large-mouthed bass, no record fish of that species has been caught in Florida since June 2, 1935. On that date, George W. Perry caught a large-mouthed weighing 22 pounds, 4 ounces at Montgomery Lake in Alabama.

It's possible that record will be beaten some day in Florida. A brand new fishing area deep in the Everglades is being opened by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the State Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. Tales of monstrous bass have been coming out of that mysterious area for years. Some day, perhaps, the great grand daddy of all largemouthed bass will be hooked and landed in that virgin fishing area.

Getting back to the saltwater gamesters for a last word, in case the sportsman doesn't think he'll top a world record in Florida, he might try the Bahamas, almost within spitting distance. Over the years, 51 records have been hung up around our neighboring isles to the east of Florida. Some 13 species are represented and most of the catches were made in waters near Bimini, Cat Cay, Walker Cay, Nassau and Berry Island.

Of course if you're heavily laden with cash and want to roam far afield, there's always Panama, Chile, Peru, New Zealand, Australia and other way stations. Some interesting world's records have been hung up in those places.

At any rate, you sportsmen, come on in, the water's fine. You never can tell what you'll get when you fish in and around Florida. You might just land a record fish.

A sailfish goes straight up in the air in a terrific leap. It is a great sight to see one of these beauties dancing down the Stream after being lured to the hook of a fortunate angler. It is such a sight, and the fish's fight for freedom that send ardent fishermen to the deep for a battle with the fighting gamester.

HEADQUARTERS AND CLINIC BUILDING OF THE PALM BEACH COUNTY CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S SOCIETY, A BUILDING CONSTRUCTED ENTIRELY FROM UNSOLICITED CONTRIBUTIONS, SHOWING THE SECOND FLOOR, BUILT LAST SUMMER AND IN OPERATION THIS SEASON.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S SOCIETY

The House Volunteer Gifts Built

So skillfully has the second floor of the Palm Beach County Crippled Children's Society building been placed atop the one-story structure serving for a number of years that many persons pass it daily without even realizing the transformation made last Summer.

Even though the case load does increase from year to year, it's not so much the matter of additional room for new cases, as it is the expansion of the services to handle the work so much more efficiently and adequately, according to Mrs. Audrey Lester, director.

"And there's still room to grow, too," she exclaims happily.

The proudest boast of Mrs. Wiley R. Reynolds, president for a number of years, is that the Crippled Children's Society has never solicited a cent during the years in which it has grown to the handsome two-story building on the southwest corner of Hibiscus Avenue and Royal Palm Way. With the exception of an allocation from the Community Chests of Palm Beach and West Palm Beach, and from the fees from patients able to pay, the Society has grown entirely from unsolicited contributions.

Addition of the second floor last Summer was accomplished literally with faith, hope and charity. The project had the blessing last March of the board of governors, who approved Mrs. Reynolds' desire to go ahead even though building of the second story would leave the Society, probably slightly in debt and without reserve funds.

The project was launched, accomplished at a cost of between $105,000 and $108,000, with a small indebtedness still remaining. Gustav A. Maas, architect for both the original building and addition, and P. C. Lissen-den, general contractor for both, allowed generous discounts on their fees, according to Mrs. Reynolds.

Despite the name of Crippled Children's Society, the clinic facilities at the Society building have proved a haven for adult cases in need of special therapy and care. The staff has grown to 14 full-time and one part-time worker, including the director, pre-school teacher, speech therapist and occupational therapist.

An average of 65 patients a day is handled, with those able to pay the full, nominal fees doing so, those able to pay partly doing that. No patients in real need, unable to pay at all, are turned away, Mrs. Lester said. Any patients outside of Palm Beach and Martin Counties are supposed to pay, as Martin County's Community Chest also contributes to the Society as well as those in Palm Beach.

Mrs. Reynolds devotes much of her time to administrative detail at the Society, and keeps in constant touch with Mrs. Lester and the staff.

Officers in addition to a very large staff of governors, include with Mrs. Reynolds: Mrs. R. R. Brown, executive vice president; Mrs. R. W. Erskine, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter Goodwillie, treasurer; Mrs. M. F. Baugher, Mrs. M. A. Bishop, Mrs. Thomas M. Cook, Mrs. James A. dePeyster, Mrs. Henry C. Gibson, Mrs. Joseph F. Gunster, Mrs. E. W. Jackson, Mrs. J. Spencer Love, Dr. David W. Martin, Mrs. Jacob Marx, Dr. T. Norley, Mrs. George W. Slaton, and Mrs. Lester, executive committee.

A craft of comfort is the 75-foot houseboat, "Marana," owned by Edward Coppage of Palm Beach. Mr. Coppage, president of the Florida Lawn Tennis Association, with Mrs. Coppage and their young daughter, Anita, moved aboard Marana permanently in February. Combining the beauty of boating and the convenience of life ashore, the Coppages will cruise northward in the Summer and return here with the snowbirds.

THE LINCOLN PREMIERE CONVERTIBLE

Coat by Vera Maxwell

Never before a Lincoln so long ... and so longed-for!

America, we are happy to report, seems to have completely lost its heart to this completely new fine car.

For this longest, lowest of all Lincolns is total newness. In every distinctive line it says: this is the one and only completely new fine car of the year. There is a fresh newness here . . . of beauty, of power, of performance . . . that has won instant acclaim from those who recognize the finest.

Lincoln Beauty? Its essence is the clean line . . . the uncluttered sweep of Lincoln's breathtaking length. Here is good taste that speaks with quiet authority.

Lincoln Power? The mighty, new 285 horsepower engine . . . teamed with the incomparably smooth Turbo-Drive transmission

. . . delivers more usable power than ever. Laze through traffic with incredible agility . . . leap around highway slow-pokes . . . float up the steepest mountain grade . . . and you'll know at last how a fine car can step.

Lincoln Performance? Here is roadability you've never dared imagine. Unique ball-joint suspension, married to Lincoln's scant five feet of lowness, locks you sure-footed and safe to the sharpest of curves.

America's motoring trend-setters have taken Lincoln to their hearts . . . in truly marvelous numbers. Are you, perhaps, denying yourself an experience that should be yours? Are you missing the adventure of Lincoln?

LINCOLN
Unmistakably . . . the finest in the fine car field
